

Chapter 19

Seeing her blushing face, George said, "It's okay to sign the contract. We can renegotiate the terms."

"Okay!" Sigrid nodded quickly. As long as she didn't have to 'do the dirty' at night, she could take a few steps back on the other points. This was not a problem at all!

For the next ten minutes, they sat in front of the computer and considered their conditions.

George had already prepared the way to deal with her. With her sitting next to him and smelling her faint body fragrance, he couldn't help but smile and think of the past.

The year he was in the first grade of primary school, she had been bullied by several naughty boys in the class who wanted to attract her attention because she was so cute. Those boys deliberately pulled her braids, which made her cry in pain.

Enchanted, he handed her a handkerchief. She took it without hesitation and wiped her tears and snot on it. Perhaps it was because he had taken the initiative to hand over the handkerchief, the little girl thought he was a nice guy. Then she cried so hard that she threw herself right into his arms and wiped her tears and snot with his uniform shirt...

George had never been so embarrassed. When the day's classes had finished, he went home wearing a shirt full of tears and snot.

He knew who she was because he investigated her identity after the incident, but then they didn't see each other for a long time after that encounter.

The second time they met was five years later after he had successfully taken over his family business. She was out eating with Rebecca and he was sitting at the next table.

Since then, he had intentionally or unconsciously taken care of the Vincent family and successfully gotten to know the two sisters.

.....

Indeed, he had a crush on Sigrid.

But three years ago, when she was with Edward, George's parents happened to ask about it.

He had his pride. Seeing that she and Edward had a good relationship at that time, he chose Rebecca but kept a close watch on Sigrid and Edward all the time to see when they would break up.

'Well, they will definitely break up because sooner or later she will be mine.' George thought to himself then.

George looked at Sigrid's small face in front of him now. His usual cold expression softened a little, and the corners of his mouth were slightly lifted at this moment.

"Since we are married, how can I let you go?" he thought to himself.

This little girl was conservative. She had not had a s*xual relationship with Edward in those nearly three years. He had to do this step by step so as not to scare her off.

'I should first set a small goal and let her fall in love with me first.' George told himself.

Sigrid felt that the revised contract was almost complete. She turned her face and was about to say something, but her lips gently wiped past his chin...

She was shocked and quickly leaned back. When she saw George getting closer, she got a little nervous. She was about to move back further away from him when a big hand wrapped around her waist. Then she heard the man's low and sexy voice, "Be careful, you'll fall."

Sigrid looked at the large space beside her and really didn't think that she would fall down!

Could she take his behavior as he was taking advantage of her?

'No, no, he is so upright, how could he possibly be hitting on me! He doesn't like me!' she tried to convince herself.

Sigrid quickly pointed to the computer screen and said, "I've added all the things I wanted. Do you have anything else to add? If not, we can print out and sign the contract."

George's eyes moved from her face to the computer screen and scanned the content roughly.

But after a moment, he fixed his eyes on one of the items in the contract and asked, "Want a divorce in the future?"