

Chapter 1

"...I Esther, bow before the Almighty God in heaven, that I am going to serve you with all my heart and never depict, so Lord please help me!"

Esther, a beautiful but humble woman had just taken an oath in her journey in serving the Lord after completing successful in training to be a Nun.

She was the most determined and very many people at the parish looked up to her because of her hard work and willingness to do something. She would also volunteer in places where even her seniors would not and she was indeed the most loved person at the parish and not only the best.

The oath-taking function was over and very unfortunately, this was going to be the very last day at the parish, Esther neither believed this for this had always been her heart where one could also call home. Living it would never be that easy and she indeed needed some time to be alone so that she would think over it. Esther was given all the space as she walked around the church admiring how beautiful it looked bringing a lot of memories of the glorious Sunday service that was conducted at the same place. She had indeed inspired so many children and girls in specific in being a better person for the sake of humanity, how was she to leave all this?

Things had started to run faster in her mind out of too much that she had to go to an open place and take some free powerful breaths to see whether things could resolve "You have to stay calm Esther and just trust God in this, but why would he want me to leave?" Esther talked to herself so bitterly. This was her ugliest moment so far at the parish. Gabriella, her best friend for life whom they had shared so much attributes almost in all aspects including physically but just unique in her own way had just noticed that she was all alone exploding in thoughts and lucky was she, she always got her, especially in times of need. That was a true friendship indeed, the one built on a solid foundation and ones success leads to the fellows.

She moved closer to her and said to her.

"All will be fine Esther, this is never the end of the world, it's rather a starting point for you to continue spreading the good news through missionary."

"Why did God just choose me out of all the nuns present,if he had known how much I loved this place?is life really fair?"Gabriella cried.

"Am so sorry dear,this are God's plans which are beyond our understanding! you just have to go dear!"

As they were having that final conversation. Bishop Elias,the oldest of them all at the parish whose age had corresponded his wisdom had just come in.

Gabriella had given them a humble time for them to have the conversation for the two,

"I am the one who brought you to this place dear I as I have watched how big you have grown spirituality,to say that I am impressed and very proud of you will be an understatement!"Bishop Elias then took some moment as he had become emotional."However,things happen Esther that even we ourselves can't explain,we just leave it for God.He has entrusted you to now go and spread your love at the orphanage,please listen to his voice. The orphans at the place are patiently waiting for you,the whole place is empty!" The Bishop then said as he walked.

"You never dissapoint me Esther, please be the person I have always known." He was also crying as she walked out,he really was going to miss her.In all the twenty years of being a Father and another twenty of Bishophood, this was indeed his most emotional moments.

That night was a young one as Esther ensured that she conducted her last deeds at the place for she had never known if she would ever come back.

Very early in the morning,she had already left for her journey at the Orphanage which was located in the city where it was far away from the parish especially now that she had to use a public bus.

At the bus, there was this woman who had been shivering a lot out of cold and nowone had offered to help her for they had realised that Esther,a Nun was available.

At that moment,there was completely nothing that she could do in helping her, but being a Nun,she was also a missionar,and so had to always come up with the solution in promotion of well being.

She wanted some clothes to keep her warm and had done her best in coming up with a solution, realizing that there was no extra one

Esther had just removed her whole Nun clothes and gave them to her to fight the cold which was so effective leaving her with some underneath clothing though still looked presentable to the society. Her body was now in perfect picture as the females at the bus wished they were that blessed too, God had kept everything in place in matters relating to her body organs, especially the reproductive ones.

They were all surprised and impressed with all the the curves that this angel of God had!! The men were in more pain as each of them would never stop making an eye contact with all the body liabilities. With all that salivating looks, the driver was a second away from involving them in a terrible road accident.

They finally arrived at the City through the mercies of God and as everyone boarded out of the bus, the shivering woman had already disappeared out of nowhere.

Esther became so stranded at how she was going to arrive at the orphanage without the nun clothes, she would be the devil herself or something of that kind!

A Playboy like young and handsome man had just noticed her stranded as he went for her help,

"Excuse me miss, you seem disturbed. Is everything okay?"

He asked.
