

Found Pregnant After Divorce by Emiissmx Chapter 2

Chapter 2 I Like Someone Else

All the servants went out to welcome Kingston, while Krista stood upstairs and watched quietly.

Kingston looked like a million dollars.

He was 1.86 meters tall, with a golden ratio. His legs were 1.2 meters long, and he didn't have any flab. His firm muscles gave Krista a sense of security.

Krista knew these that night.

What happened that night was so absurd that she felt like it was a dream. The next morning, she went back embarrassingly, not knowing how to speak to Kingston.

Kingston's face was impeccable. He was like a beloved child of God. He was strong, handsome, and resolute. His features were strongly defined.

God was truly unfair. Besides a perfect figure and a handsome face, Kingston had high IQ and a high degree.

He got a double degree in finance and law as a teenager. After graduation, he took over his family business and made his way to the top of the capital in just a few years. Several years ago, he successfully expanded overseas markets.

The day after they got the marriage certificate, he went abroad and never came back, claiming that the branch had just started.

Just as Krista was lost in thought, she felt two cold gazes. She was so frightened that she immediately hid behind the curtains.

She didn't know why she had to hide. It was totally a reflex action.

She was extremely unconfident in front of Kingston.

Her stepmother was the head of her family, so she was not favored at home. If she hadn't married Kingston, she would still have been ordered by her stepmother as a servant.

Her mother saved Kingston's grandmother, so she could marry Kingston.

However, she understood that Kingston didn't dislike her. He didn't hate her, because she had always been obedient.

A servant knocked on the door.

"Mr. Irwin is back. Please go downstairs for dinner."

Krista immediately went downstairs. The dinner was ready.

She and Kingston were separated by the long table.

Scanned with CamScanner

She liked Chinese food, while Kingston liked western food. Since he came back, the servants had prepared his favorites.

She couldn't help but retch when she saw the medium-cooked steak with blood.

"What's wrong?" Kingston looked at her and frowned.

"It's raw. I always ate Chinese food at home." The western food didn't agree with Krista. Moreover, she had a bad appetite recently, probably because the weather was still very hot.

"Bring her well-done steak."

"Thank you."

Krista whispered her thanks.

No one spoke during dinner. They were not like a couple, but strangers who had to share a table with each other.

After finishing his meal, Kingston gracefully wiped his mouth. Krista hesitated for a moment, wanting to tell him what happened that night. "Kingston." "Krista."

The two spoke in unison.

Krista looked at Kingston nervously and said, "You speak first."

Kingston then began, "Krista, let's divorce."

Krista was taken aback.

"Krista.

Let's divorce."

A servant brought the divorce agreement. Kingston had signed his name. His handwriting was vigorous and forceful, like a calligrapher's.

But Krista was no longer in the mood to appreciate it.

The most important thing in divorce was the distribution of property.

Krista glanced at the agreement. After the divorce, she would have two properties under her name. One was a shop and the other was a residence. Both of them were located in the downtown area, with a market value of tens of millions. In addition, she would also get an additional compensation of 50 million, and a small company with a net profit of several million per year.

She didn't suffer any loss by sleeping with Kingston once. ke Someone Else

But she was curious about the reason why Kingston wanted to divorce her.

She closed the agreement and looked at him boldly for the first time.

Kingston met her eyes.

This was the first time he had sized up her face.

Her face was delicate, and her clear eyes were like black gemstones.

She was very thin, as if the Irwins did not give her any good food and drinks. She was so thin that it made his heart ache.

Her figure was similar to that of the girl who had sex with him in the darkness.

If he met her again, he would feed her up a bit.

The thin girl made his heart ache.

"May I ask why?"

"Because I like someone else;"

Kingston answered frankly,