

When His Eyes Opened by Simple Silence

Chapter 964

The staff handed the pass to Avery, "Ms. Tate, this is Hallstatt Villa. You can only enter if you have the pass. If You want visit somewhere always carry the pass with you."

Avery took the pass and dragged her suitcase. She walked towards this mansion full of modern technology.

Entering the lobby on the first floor, she suddenly found that the villa looked more open and spacious from the inside than from the outside.

It was as if she had entered a magnificent maze.

She turned on her phone and found the lesson plan sent by the vice president. Then drag the suitcase to find the multi-purpose training room.

After a while, she came to the door of the training room, knocked on the door, and pushed the door open.

There were about twenty or thirty people of men and women sitting inside.

After she pushed the door open, everyone's eyes turned to her.

Her face turned red. Just when she was about to say "I'm sorry I'm late" a low and familiar voice came from the podium: "Why don't you come in soon?"

Avery felt like an electric shock, and her whole body was numb.

Did she have hallucinations? Why did she hear Elliot's voice?

She will never hear his voice wrong! It's Elliot!

She looked at the podium, and saw Elliot, well-dressed on the podium, looking at her with a well-groomed look.

How could this be?

Why didn't the vice president tell her in advance that Elliot would come here too?

If she knew that Elliot was here to give lectures, she would never come...be a student!

How embarrassing she is!

"Sorry, I went to the wrong place." Avery remembered that the teacher for tonight was a man named 'Zachariah'.

"Avery, you're right." Elliot strode up to her, took the suitcase in her hand and explained, "Zachariah is not feeling well, let me take the class instead."

Avery was speechless.

"Avery, you go to a vacant seat first. The rest will be discussed after class." After Elliot finished speaking, he carried her luggage and went to the podium!

She stared at her luggage with scarlet eyes, almost conditioned to grab it.

She took a deep breath, turned and walked towards the back row. After she sat down, she immediately took out her mobile phone and intending to send a message to the vice president, asking him if he knew about Elliot replacing other lecturers.

"Don't play with your mobile phone." On the stage, Elliot could see Avery's little movements clearly.

After Elliot spoke seriously, everyone followed his gaze and looked at Avery with a 'swish'.

Avery's ashamed!

What the h-e-l-l are you doing? Do you really think you are her teacher? Professor James Hough was not so strict with her before, why should he care about her?

"I'm recording, record what you said, and go back and study hard!" She looked straight at him boldly.

The female student sitting next to her reminded her in a disdainful tone, "Ms. Tate, is this your first time to attend the training? Don't you know that the training content is strictly confidential? And you are not wearing a uniform, and you are carrying such a large Come in with your suitcase, do you think this is a vegetable market?"

"Yes, it's my first time here. Have you come many times?" Avery looked at each other innocently, "Is it an honor to come many times? Didn't you say that this place is to teach everyone how to succeed? You have come so many times and you still haven't succeeded?"

Someone snickered at the scene.

"Avery! If you think you are successful, what are you doing?!" The other party exploded.

"Do you want to hear the truth?" Avery looked at the woman who was close at hand, and dragged Elliot into the water word by word, "I didn't come to listen to the class at all, I came to see the man on the podium!"
