

A Cue for Love Chapter 830

Chapter 830 Is This How You Take Care Of Your Girlfriend

When Steven saw that Natalie had fainted, he could not help but ask, "Natalie... What's wrong with her?"

"She's suffering from severe injuries. She was barely hanging in there while delivering the antidote," replied Ross angrily.

"But why?"

"Yeah! Why?" Glancing at Natalie in his arms, Ross snapped in annoyance, "In order to give Samuel the antidote, she did not even have time to treat her injuries. Still, she secretly changed her clothes."

"What?"

Only then did Steven realize that Natalie had almost died finding the antidote for his brother.

"Move aside! I'm sending Ms. Nichols to the hospital right away." Before leaving, Ross glanced at Luna. "Since you said that you're the doctor in charge of Samuel, please take care of him. Ms. Nichols has already injected the antidote into him, so his condition should improve gradually."

With that, Ross carried the injured Natalie and strode out of the Bowers residence before heading straight to the hospital.

When they arrived at the hospital, the nurse helped Natalie change into a hospital gown. She was surprised upon seeing how serious Natalie's injuries were.

After changing Natalie's clothes, the nurse walked out of the operating theater and shot Ross a fierce glare. "Is this how you take care of your girlfriend?"

"I..."

Before Ross could deny it, the nurse scolded indignantly, "Your girlfriend is so severely injured! Why did you send her over so late? Do you want her to die from the excruciating pain?"

"I..."

"Stop finding excuses and handle the paperwork!" The nurse continued, "The hospital will think of a way."

After saying that, the nurse quickly went to prepare the equipment needed for the stitching.

The nurse's scolding kept echoing in Ross's mind. Behind his glasses, a guilty look flashed across his eyes. He clenched his right fist and punched the wall forcefully.

At that moment, he hated how weak he was. If I were stronger, I might have been able to protect Natalie.

Meanwhile, far away in Loang, a man was standing by the lake.

Holding an azure can, he grabbed some fish food and scattered it over the lake.

Immediately, a dozen carps of red, black, and gold rushed over and competed amongst themselves for the food.

As he gazed at the carps, his mood improved. A smile was even playing on his lips. That was until he received a call.

"King, I'm... I'm Zophie."

King spoke solemnly into the Bluetooth earphone, "What's wrong? It's my first time hearing you speak in such a flustered manner."

"King, Gale... Gale died..."

Zophie sounded like she was sobbing, but she did not dare to cry out loud when speaking to King.

"Continue."

"The research base at Chanaea has been blown up. As the explosion was too impactful, it even attracted the police's attention. The base automatically activated the self-destruction system. Now, it has become a pile of rubble!" exclaimed Zophie sadly.

"Gale... Gale has also been blown up during his mission. His corpse couldn't even be found..."

"Where did the bomb come from?"

"I checked the recordings of Gale's calls before he died. It's Natalie. I don't know how, but she managed to infiltrate the base and enter the central pharmacy," informed Zophie.

She thought that King would say something, but all she heard was, "Understood."

Then, the call ended.

However, the man did not act as calmly as he sounded over the phone. Instead, he threw the can forcefully into the lake.

Although the fish food was scattered all over, the carps were shocked by the sudden splash. None of them dared to swim forward.

“Natalie, it looks like I’ve underestimated you...” His eyes were filled with rage. “You managed to infiltrate the underground palace that I’ve created. If I can’t make you work for me, I’ll destroy you myself!”

A Cue for Love Chapter 831

Chapter 831 Too Obedient

Natalie slept for three days and three nights straight in the hospital ward.

When she was still in a coma, she even dreamed that Samuel no longer wanted her.

It was a very blurry and fragmented dream. All Natalie could see was Samuel’s back when he left.

However, she knew very well that it was merely a dream.

After all, Samuel was the last person in the world who would abandon or betray her.

When she opened her eyes, the first thing she saw was the white ceiling. Following that, the pungent smell of disinfectant drifted into her nose.

Evidently, she was in the hospital. What she saw earlier was just a nonsensical dream.

Now that she had woken up from the dream, there was no need to concern herself over it.

Natalie moved slightly, but the pain was so great that she gritted her teeth.

Five little children immediately surrounded her when she moved.

“Mommy!”

“Mommy!”

“Mommy!”

The five adorable children gathered around her and called out for her at the same time.

It was Natalie's first time seeing Franklin, Clayton, Xavian, Sophia, and Yumi after escaping the brink of death. Although she was glad, she soon realized how poor a mother she was.

Not only had she left her children behind, but the thought of what would happen to them if she died did not even cross her mind during that moment of danger.

"Aren't you supposed to be at Great-grandpa's house? Why are you here?" asked Natalie with a frown.

Actually, she did not wish for the five children to be there.

Considering how much the kids loved her, they would definitely have cried after seeing her in that state.

"It's been too long since they last saw you and Samuel. Since they couldn't contact you by phone, they kept pestering Old Mr. Bowers. He initially lied to them, but naturally, he could not deceive them for long. Eventually, the lie was exposed, and he had no choice but to be honest with them," explained Justin.

He continued, "After finding out about your situation, the five of them couldn't possibly stay idle at home. Left with no choice, we could only send them here. Luckily, they're very obedient. They did not kick up a fuss in the hospital ward and kept you company for two days."

"Two days?" repeated Natalie. "Justin, how did they eat and sleep in this hospital ward?"

"When they were hungry, I'd just bring some food from the cafeteria for them. They slept on the hospital beds and couches at the side." Glancing at the five children, Justin continued, "Initially, I was worried that they'd be too noisy and affect your rest. But they were very obedient. They'd take turns keeping you company and even summon the doctor over to change the IV drip or wet your lips using cotton buds."

When Natalie heard that, she stared at the children's adorable faces as tears welled up in her eyes.

Life's tough, but with these five kids, I feel so happy and fulfilled.

"Mommy, do you want to eat anything?" asked Sophia sweetly. "If you want to eat something, I'll call Mr. Gavin and ask him to cook it!"

"I do," replied Natalie with a smile. "I'd like to have some strawberries, mushroom soup, prawns, and coke."

"You can't drink coke!"

“You can’t drink coke!”

“You can’t drink coke!”

“You can’t drink coke!”

“You can’t drink coke!”

Natalie was speechless.

She just wanted some coke, but she did not expect the five children to oppose it unanimously.

However, she knew clearly that they were just concerned about her, given that she was injured and coke had no nutritional value. Hence, she did not insist. “I won’t drink coke. I’ll have some orange juice instead. But... can you go home first? After you’ve packed everything I need, you can visit me tomorrow.”

After noting down everything that Natalie wanted, the five kids nodded.

Justin instructed his subordinate to send the five kids back to the Bowers residence. He also reminded the subordinate that the kids were all extremely important and must not be in any danger.