

A Cue for Love Chapter 1021

A Cue for Love (Natalie and Samuel)

Chapter 1021

Chapter 1021 How Can It Be You

Samuel's eyebrows furrowed tightly, and his dark eyes glinted as he kept trying to recall when he had seen Heidi.

After mulling over it, he felt that the only possibility was that while waiting for Natalie at the entrance of the Leitz family, he had unknowingly crossed paths with her.

However, since Samuel only loved Natalie and had no interest in other women, he only thought of her adoration as purely troublesome.

Glancing at the rearview mirror, Jesper noticed Samuel's piercing gaze and cautiously asked, "Mr. Bowers, although Heidi is merely the second daughter of the Leitz family, I heard that Geert is very fond of this daughter he thought he had lost. Recently, Mrs. Bowers also has business dealings with the Leitz family, so to rashly offend her..."

Offending Heidi is an easy feat. The difficult part is going against her will, which will only affect Mr. Bowers' power in Loang, and likewise affect the business dealings between Mrs. Bowers and the eldest daughter of the Leitz family.

"So what?" With a firm gaze, Samuel asked in a low voice, "Are you expecting me to give in to this woman's desire? So what if other women covet it? My body and heart belong to my wife."

Jesper was rendered speechless, feeling that he had said too much.

Anyway, when it comes to something that would harm the interests of Mrs. Bowers, even dilemmas aren't negotiable. What's the use of talking too much? It'll only result in having to witness Mr. Bowers' proclamation of affection...

"Mr. Bowers, what are your plans?" Jesper asked gingerly.

"Find a mall afterward and switch outfits with me." Samuel slowly rolled up his sleeves with a cold gleam in his eyes as he continued, "Let's be courteous first. When you meet Heidi, pass on a message to her for me..."

Jesper did not have much experience dealing with women, but since it was Samuel's instructions, no matter how troubled he felt, he could only bite the bullet and agree.

When they arrived at the mall, Samuel and Jesper entered the men's restroom simultaneously and came out at the same time not long after.

The stalkers were instructed to tail the person with a white shirt and suit pants, so upon seeing Jesper clad in a white shirt, they followed him without any hesitation.

Samuel watched the group of idiots tail Jesper with a contemptuous smirk before leaving the mall in a low-key manner.

At dusk, those men finally made a move on Jesper.

The latter abandoned his body's conditioned reflexes and allowed himself to be knocked out by a blow to the back of his head and lifted onto a small courier truck.

Upon reaching Fullmoon, Jesper was blindfolded and pushed into a private room covered with red silk.

The private room was decorated amorously, with the red silk thin as a cicada's wing bathing every item in the room in a red glow and a sensually sweet fragrance from the aromatherapy permeating the air.

An atmosphere like that would naturally arouse one's sexual instincts.

Heidi observed the man being pushed into the room with her chin resting on her right hand, unable to conceal the delight in her eyes.

She had never developed such strong feelings for a man to the extent of putting her foot down and sending someone to abduct him in this manner.

But what's the problem with that? I fell in love with him at first sight.

She knew very well that such strong affections only happen once in a lifetime, and she would not get another chance again.

Hence, she had to hold on to him no matter what!

Heidi pulled the shawl off her shoulders, revealing her snow-white shoulders, lifted the red silk, and slowly walked to the man's side.

As the room was dimly lit, coupled with the fact that the man was blindfolded and his hands were tied, she did not notice anything unusual at first.

However, when Heidi untied the ropes on the man's wrists and removed the blindfold from his face, she screamed in shock when she discovered that the person in front of her was not Samuel.

"You're not that man! How can it be you?"

A Cue for Love Chapter 1022

A Cue for Love (Natalie and Samuel)

Chapter 1022

Chapter 1022 Not Willing To Give Up

Noticing that Heidi had gone quiet, Jesper uttered coldly, "I've conveyed Mr. Bowers' message."

She cried with a heavy heart, "Wait! I still have something to ask you."

Jesper stopped and took a deep breath. "Go on, Ms. Leitz."

"Those photos..."

Understanding dawned upon Jesper, and he replied, "You can rest assured that these photos don't mean anything, Ms. Leitz. As long as you don't continue to be so obsessed, these photos will never—"

"I wasn't asking about that!" Heidi interrupted, "I'm asking about these photos. Has Samuel seen them? Does he think that I'm a filthy and utterly shameless woman?"

Jesper did not expect her to ask him that question. He looked more unsettled, but his tone was still professional and calm. "I've made myself very clear just now. Mr. Bowers is married with children. As for whether or not he had seen the photos or what his thoughts are of them, they're of no importance to you..."

Tears filled Heidi's eyes, and she instinctively gnashed her teeth.

Jesper shot her a glance. Feeling that he had said enough, he turned and exited the private room, leaving behind Heidi, who looked as though her soul had left her body.

She clutched her chest as tears kept slipping out of her reddened eyes.

I love Samuel so much. If I'd known that I would meet a man like him, I would never have done such an absurd thing! What do I do?

Despite knowing Samuel's true identity and knowing that he had a significant other, Heidi felt like she had been bewitched, caught in the abyss of love. Not only was she unable to extricate herself, but she was also falling deeper and deeper into it!

Married with children?

The image of Samuel holding an umbrella for Natalie under the rain suddenly came to her mind.

The man would rather get mostly drenched under the pouring rain but still acted like the most loyal knight, holding the umbrella above her head and not allowing a single drop of rain to fall on her. I'd simply thought it was an act of "loyalty" toward his female superior back then. Now that I think about it, with his status, why would he go to such lengths if Natalie isn't his loved one? Now I know... Everything was destined from the first sight!

Despite knowing the truth, Heidi still could not let it go.

How she wished that the woman treated like a precious treasure by Samuel was her, not Natalie!

My appearance is exquisite and more prominent than Helma's. Although I can't compare to her in terms of status, now that I've been recognized by my father as the second daughter of the Leitz family, we won't lose the slightest to Natalie on wealth and background! I won't accept this! I refuse to accept this outcome, and I don't want to give up!

At the thought, she picked up the scissors on the table and cut off the red silk in the private room, leaving them scattered all over the ground in pieces.

Natalie was completely unaware of everything that had happened on Heidi's side as she was currently dissecting a mouse in the lab.

She had purified a particular toxin from Samuel's blood and injected it into the mouse. In less than two minutes, the mouse made a shrill cry and died from bleeding through all its orifices.

Modern medicine focused on microscopy, while traditional medicine was about macroscopic observation.

From Natalie's perspective, as long as she could cure the poison in Samuel's body, she was willing to attempt either way.

Hence, she was now dissecting the mouse and removing its heart and liver for testing.

Ross was her assistant in Chanaea, but since he could not leave the country due to other responsibilities, Natalie hired a new female assistant, Xenia Wilson.

Xenia was a little surprised to see Natalie's skillful and professional techniques.

She had naively thought that since Natalie had hired her to become her assistant, the latter would leave the dissecting work to her. However, little did she expect such a breathtakingly beautiful woman to be so impressive, as the mouse was neatly dissected in no time.

"Your technique..." Xenia's eyes flashed with incredulity.

"What about it?" asked Natalie with a frown.

Xenia exclaimed with heartfelt admiration, "It's amazing!"

The corners of Natalie's mouth lifted slightly. "It's all right, I suppose. My skills in dissecting mice aren't as good as dissecting people."

A Cue for Love Chapter 1023

A Cue for Love (Natalie and Samuel)

Chapter 1023

Chapter 1023 Targeted Simultaneously

Xenia furrowed her brows upon hearing that. Only then did she suddenly realize that she had underestimated Natalie.

After completing the dissection process, Natalie threw the scalpel on the tray beside her, took off her mask and gloves, and said, "Xenia, I've placed all the necessary dissected items in the petri dish. I'll leave the testing to you."

In response, Xenia gave her a thumbs up.

After leaving the lab, Natalie went to the garage to get her car and prepared to go back to Dream to continue with her work.

At that moment, Heidi was observing Natalie, who was walking out of the building, through her sunglasses from the driver's seat of a Maserati. Her eyes flashed with strong resentment and jealousy as her expression grew murderous.

So this is the woman Samuel loves! I must admit that she's indeed beautiful. But my looks are comparable to hers. So what if she's married with children now? That doesn't mean that she can't get a divorce in the future.

Heidi took off her sunglasses and fell into deep thought. If my advances on Samuel are unsuccessful, why don't I shift my target onto her instead?

Meanwhile, there was also a black motorcycle in the parking lot. The female rider wearing a helmet watched as Natalie drove her car out of the parking lot before glancing at her watch, recording the latter's movements.

Zophie's eyes gleamed with malice.

I only have one chance to kill Natalie, so I must succeed.

Dark clouds loomed over the sky.

Natalie felt some tightness in her chest but did not dwell on it, merely thinking that the air pressure might be a little low.

It was a little late by the time she returned home, but Emma was kind enough to leave her some food.

Natalie could not help but ask curiously, "I can just eat alone, Emma. Why did you save me two portions?"

"One is for you, and one is for Mr. Bowers," Emma explained.

"Isn't Samuel already home? Did he not have dinner with the children? Why didn't he eat?"

Emma grinned from ear to ear. "I already told him to eat with the children, but he insisted upon waiting for you to come back and eat together."

She then added, "I used to complain that Mr. Bowers must be a heartless man as he left so many kids for you to care for on your own. But now that I think of it, I'm the one who had misjudged him. Your children have grown, and yet, he pampers you more than he pampers them. This shows that he truly loves you!"

Emma had experienced quite a lot of ups and downs in life, and yet even she spoke highly of Samuel.

Instead of changing the topic bashfully, Natalie nodded proudly. "Yes! I am very lucky to be able to meet and marry him!"

Emma responded with a smile, "I'll call Mr. Bowers to come down for dinner then."

She was about to turn around and go upstairs when she saw Samuel coming downstairs. "It seems that I don't have to. He's already heading down."

Emma left after laying out the food.

Natalie held her plate and bit her fork as she asked, "Did you hear what I said to Emma just now?"

"Which part?" Samuel asked with a grin, "Is it the part where you said you're lucky enough to marry me?"

His precise repetition made her blush instantly.

Still keeping up the pretense, huh? He obviously heard the key phrase, but he's still pretending to ask which part I'm referring to.

"Why are you asking the obvious?" Natalie pretended to be stern. "I think you just want to bully me!"

"How can I bully you when I love you so much?" Samuel said with a deep gaze, "If you think I bullied you, you can do the same to me. Be it double, triple, or a hundredfold, I'll allow you to do it without complaints."

Natalie muttered, "Samuel, where did you learn to say such words from? Why does it feel like you're getting better at saying sweet nothings after not seeing you for more than a month?"

A Cue for Love Chapter 1024

A Cue for Love (Natalie and Samuel)

Chapter 1023

Chapter 1023 Targeted Simultaneously

Xenia furrowed her brows upon hearing that. Only then did she suddenly realize that she had underestimated Natalie.

After completing the dissection process, Natalie threw the scalpel on the tray beside her, took off her mask and gloves, and said, "Xenia, I've placed all the necessary dissected items in the petri dish. I'll leave the testing to you."

In response, Xenia gave her a thumbs up.

After leaving the lab, Natalie went to the garage to get her car and prepared to go back to Dream to continue with her work.

At that moment, Heidi was observing Natalie, who was walking out of the building, through her sunglasses from the driver's seat of a Maserati. Her eyes flashed with strong resentment and jealousy as her expression grew murderous.

So this is the woman Samuel loves! I must admit that she's indeed beautiful. But my looks are comparable to hers. So what if she's married with children now? That doesn't mean that she can't get a divorce in the future.

Heidi took off her sunglasses and fell into deep thought. If my advances on Samuel are unsuccessful, why don't I shift my target onto her instead?

Meanwhile, there was also a black motorcycle in the parking lot. The female rider wearing a helmet watched as Natalie drove her car out of the parking lot before glancing at her watch, recording the latter's movements.

Zophie's eyes gleamed with malice.

I only have one chance to kill Natalie, so I must succeed.

Dark clouds loomed over the sky.

Natalie felt some tightness in her chest but did not dwell on it, merely thinking that the air pressure might be a little low.

It was a little late by the time she returned home, but Emma was kind enough to leave her some food.

Natalie could not help but ask curiously, "I can just eat alone, Emma. Why did you save me two portions?"

"One is for you, and one is for Mr. Bowers," Emma explained.

"Isn't Samuel already home? Did he not have dinner with the children? Why didn't he eat?"

Emma grinned from ear to ear. "I already told him to eat with the children, but he insisted upon waiting for you to come back and eat together."

She then added, "I used to complain that Mr. Bowers must be a heartless man as he left so many kids for you to care for on your own. But now that I think of it, I'm the one who had misjudged him. Your children have grown, and yet, he pampers you more than he pampers them. This shows that he truly loves you!"

Emma had experienced quite a lot of ups and downs in life, and yet even she spoke highly of Samuel.

Instead of changing the topic bashfully, Natalie nodded proudly. "Yes! I am very lucky to be able to meet and marry him!"

Emma responded with a smile, "I'll call Mr. Bowers to come down for dinner then."

She was about to turn around and go upstairs when she saw Samuel coming downstairs. "It seems that I don't have to. He's already heading down."

Emma left after laying out the food.

Natalie held her plate and bit her fork as she asked, "Did you hear what I said to Emma just now?"

"Which part?" Samuel asked with a grin, "Is it the part where you said you're lucky enough to marry me?"

His precise repetition made her blush instantly.

Still keeping up the pretense, huh? He obviously heard the key phrase, but he's still pretending to ask which part I'm referring to.

"Why are you asking the obvious?" Natalie pretended to be stern. "I think you just want to bully me!"

"How can I bully you when I love you so much?" Samuel said with a deep gaze, "If you think I bullied you, you can do the same to me. Be it double, triple, or a hundredfold, I'll allow you to do it without complaints."

Natalie muttered, "Samuel, where did you learn to say such words from? Why does it feel like you're getting better at saying sweet nothings after not seeing you for more than a month?"

A Cue for Love Chapter 1025

A Cue for Love (Natalie and Samuel)

Chapter 1024

Chapter 1024 Loss Of Taste

"This one month has allowed me to completely understand what it feels like to be separated from your loved one." Samuel's eyes narrowed slightly as he slowly added,

“Many words that I previously found to be cheesy seem to be so much easier to convey now...”

He did not utter those words half-heartedly but with unprecedented sincerity.

Contrary to him, Natalie was merely joking. However, she did not expect to receive such a serious response from him, so she could not help but feel a little surprised.

Not wanting to continue listening to his sweet nothings, she picked up some food and said, “Enough of that. Let’s eat while it’s hot.”

“Okay.”

Natalie preferred spicy food while Samuel’s taste was milder.

However, as Emma was taking care of Natalie before Samuel came along, the food Emma prepared had all the heavy flavors that Natalie preferred.

Emma had prepared pickled fish that day. No one knew what kind of spices she used, but even Natalie, who enjoyed spicy food, could not help but take a few more bites.

However, after Samuel had some of it, his visage was still pretty much bereft of emotion.

“What do you think of the fish, Samuel?” Natalie asked with a slight frown.

He narrowed his eyes. “Why do you ask?”

Natalie’s left hand clenched into a fist, but she still pretended to be calm and asked, “Don’t you think the pickled fish that Emma prepared today is quite mildly-flavored?”

Without hesitation, Samuel nodded and replied with a smile, “Yes. This fish is very bland. Maybe Emma knows I don’t like heavy-flavored food, so she made it tasteless. I’ll tell her to pay attention to the taste in the future.”

Natalie was stunned by his words.

The fish... is bland? How can it be?

She kept her eyes glued to him for a moment as if she wanted to see right through him.

Samuel couldn’t tell that I was lying, and he, a person who dislikes heavy-flavored food, had almost no reaction when he ate the pickled fish. There’s only one possibility... He has lost his sense of taste. He can’t taste anything at all!

Natalie clenched her fist tighter, and she could feel her heart aching.

This man... Even though his condition has begun to deteriorate and the toxin has begun to erode his nervous system, he still acts as though nothing's wrong before me to the point that I can't even tell that the poison has taken effect.

Although she knew that Samuel was acting to deceive her, she still had to play along with him.

He's keeping it a secret because he doesn't want me to worry. In the same way, I'll keep mum because I don't want him to worry about it.

At that thought, Natalie unfurled her fist, placed her hand on the table, and held his hand. "You don't need to tell Emma about this. It's fine to eat milder-flavored food since you like it. Besides, it's also good for your health."

Samuel nodded with a smile. "As you wish."

"Okay."

Despite the pain in her chest, she had to smile widely so that he would not detect anything.

Both Natalie and Samuel were extremely stubborn. Unless absolutely necessary, neither of them was willing to show their weak side.

The next day, Natalie received a call from the Leitz family.

"Is this Ms. Nichols speaking?"

Natalie had only met Helma a few days ago, and Anna was also busy with the design draft. By right, even if Helma wanted to see the design draft sooner, she wouldn't be this eager to see it.

Hence, Natalie was a little surprised to receive the call but quickly composed herself.

"That's me. Can I help you?"

"Ms. Leitz would like to meet you," the man on the phone drawled.

Natalie subconsciously felt that the design direction of the jewelry might need to be revised, so she nodded. "No problem. I'm free at any time."

"I'll set the meeting as tonight then. I'll send you the location later."

"Okay."

After hanging up the phone, Heidi turned off the male voice changer and reverted to her original alluring female voice.

“I’d like to see if Samuel will still want you if you were defiled, Natalie!”

Previous Chapter

Next Post