

the substitute wife: my poor husband is a billionaire

Chapter 674: Protect him with his life

□ □ □

The falling tower looked like a burning meteorite. Janet screamed and unconsciously pushed Brandon away without hesitation. Then he spread his arms and stood in front of it to protect it from any debris that could fall. It all happened in a blink of eyes. A searing heat wave swept over as the tip of the tower broke into pieces against the ground, sending burning debris flying in all directions. It was like a magnificent firework flowering. But it was the deadliest firework of the world.

Although the tower did not land on the two people, yes it crashed to the ground violently, throwing fiery shrapnel in all directions, many of whom hit the back of Janet. But she was too focused on protect Brandon to realize.

It wasn't until she was sure that Brandon It was okay that she felt a burning sensation in her back. He turned his head and, to his horror, saw that the clothes he was wearing were on fire!

Terrified, Janet let out a scream. creepy.

“Do not move!” Brandon reacted quickly, wrapping her arms around Janet and forcing her to roll across the grass with him. Soon, the flames died out.

“You're hurt?” Staring at the woman his arms, Brandon didn't realize how eagerly what his voice sounded like. raised a trembling hand and cautiously tried to lift the hem of the ,Janet's burnt blouse, but Janet stopped him quickly. Janet didn't want Brandon to worry about her, but her voice was shaky and clearly not it was good. The cold sweat on his forehead and the paleness of his face betrayed his true situation.

She was not well at all.

The sudden "fireworks" caused panic in the crowd. The spectators around they shouted and dispersed hastily as mice.

Firemen ran, put out the fires remaining on the ground and began to evacuate everyone at the amusement park.

Brandon helped Janet to her feet. He too He took this as an opportunity to lift his shirt gently to check your wounds.

Fortunately, Brandon had reacted fast enough at the time.

The burns on Janet's back were not too serious. But it was still red and swollen, covered in nasty blisters.

"Nope look...it's ugly." Janet nearly cried out in pain as Brandon lifted his shirt, but managed to squeeze his teeth and made no sound.

She didn't want to show the man any weakness. But Brandon saw right through her. Nope could understand why she was still pretending to be strong. Indescribable and complex emotions arose in his heart. They had almost died now, but Janet risked her life to protect him, completely ignoring his own safety. As a result, he got hurt, but he didn't want him to I saw her cry.

"What a foolish woman!"

“Janet, first you have to learn to protect yourself”

Hearing what he said, Janet looked at him and found with his cold and distant eyes. suddenly felt as if his heart had been ripped out. When saw the reproachful look on her face, the tears he had been holding almost burst into the act.

How could he say that to her? she just save his life! Averting the face in silence, already he didn't want to look at Brandon. Only then Brandon realized that it might have seemed too cold right now but I didn't know how to save the situation. I could only fall into silence too.

After what seemed like an eternity, the suffocating atmosphere between the two was broken with the sound of an ambulance siren.

The paramedics carefully carried Janet to the ambulance, and Brandon followed them.

Janet looked into Silence to Brandon, who was sitting by the doctor, shoulder to shoulder.

Join our Telegram channel:

His face was still cold. At that moment, she he missed old Brandon more than ever. The old Brandon would have held her in his arms, doing his best to comfort her.

However, everything I missed about the old Brandon was gone. Now there was only indifference in the eyes of this new Brandon.

“How did things turn out like this?”

□ □ □