Chapter 101

Jim was thinking about the car owner when he suddenly saw the man who came out of the jail, Cain.

Cain's suit was full of wrinkles and his hair was a little messy. His sullen expression looked like he hadn't slept for a night. He glanced at the black Cayenne. Jim didn't know if Cain saw him. He turned it into the car. The Range Rover turned around and quickly passed the black Cayenne.

Jim turned around and saw Brandon's deep eyes. He quickly turned around and sat upright on the driver's seat, not daring to move.

In the car, the atmosphere was getting more serious and suffocating.

The door was slammed close. Jim trembled. He saw Brandon get out of the car and stride toward the entrance of the jail.

Jim patted his chest and got out of the car resentfully. He didn't dare to go in, just leaning on the car and waiting patiently. He felt like a drum beating in his heart. Jim hated being involved in Savanna and Brandon's relationship.

When Savanna was told that someone had come to visit her, she asked who the man was.

She didn't get an exact answer, only that she would know when she saw him.

Savanna's mood was a mess.

Savanna raised her head and saw Brandon sitting at the other end of the long table. He lowered his head and twirled the lighter with his fingertips. There was neither joy nor anger in his expression. Despite hearing her footsteps, Brandon didn't look up.

Time slowly passed. Knowing the time was limited, Savanna said with difficulty after a long silence, "Is Mandel... okay?"

Brandon seemed to be immersed in his thoughts and didn't answer her question.

nei

Savanna felt a little desperate in her heart. She tightened her fingers until they got pale. "If there's nothing else, I'll leave now."

Savanna was about to get back to her cell.

"Winnie... Did you kill her?" Brandon's voice behind her was low and hoarse.

Savanna's body trembled. She steadied her breath, closed her eyes, and replied, "No."

After another period of silence, Savanna seemed to have heard the sound of Brandon getting up. Then, she heard loud footsteps. A whiff of pinewood and smoke wafted into her nose. Savanna looked up and saw Brandon's delicate features. His handsome face was full of pride and hostility.

"Savanna, she is not a perfect person, but she has the right to live. How can you ... be so ruthless!"

looked up and saw Brandon's delicate features. His handsome face was full of pride and hostility.

Brandon believed that Winnie was killed by her. But Savanna still held the hope in prison that he might believe her.

It turned out that she was naïve.

Being misunderstood by the man she loved the most, Savanna felt her heart cut in half by a knife. It hurt so much that her body shook. Savanna tried hard to hold down her desperation. “You said that I killed her? Do you have any evidence?”

Brandon didn't speak. He just looked at her like that. It was his gaze that made Savanna completely heartbroken. Finally, she completely lost her temper, “Yes, I hate her. I want to kill her myself.”

Savanna lowered her face, tears silently falling from the corners of her eyes. “If I did kill her, there would be no need for me to argue back. But you won't believe me. A word from you, and I'll spend the rest of my life here.”

Mandel's runny nose and crying face crossed her mind. She was in prison, but the crying of her child lingered in her ears.

Mandel was her baby.

Her heart ached. She seemed to be unable to do anything but miss him.

For Mandel, Savanna had to fight for the right to leave. She raised her teary eyes and looked at Brandon's cold face. She trembled and said in a choked voice, “Brandon, please believe me. I didn't kill her.”

Looking at Savanna's tear-stained face, pale lips, and haggard face, Brandon felt a dull pain in his heart. He reached out and pulled Savanna into his arms. His chin rubbed against her forehead as he sighed. “No matter what, I will bail you out.”

Savanna was finally relieved. However, when she heard his words, Savanna was shocked. Her face was so pale that there was no trace of blood. She suddenly pushed him away. What did he mean?

Would he take Mandel away after she got out of jail?

If so, she would rather not go out,

Brandon did not expect Savanna to push him. He staggered. He stood up and looked at Savanna coldly.

Savanna gritted his teeth. “Brandon, I will never give Mandel to you.”

She turned around and left without hesitation.

Savanna gritted his teeth. “Brandon, I will never give Mandel to you.”

She turned around and left without hesitation.

Savanna swore that she would not let Brandon bail her out. But when she knew that she could go out, Savanna was still elated. To see Mandel earlier, she just took the phone from the prison guard and immediately called Mary.

Mary was happy to receive Savanna's call. However, when Savanna asked about Mandel, Mary muttered that Brandon warned her in the morning that she couldn't open the door for Savanna. Plus, Brandon would pay for Mary's salary.

Savanna kept silent for a long time. She only felt a gust of cold wind from all directions, shaking her. It was only when Mary called her anxiously that Savanna forced a smile.

"It's fine, Mary. You can take care of Mandel for now. Brandon won't treat you badly."
Since she couldn't see Mandel, Savanna held back her eagerness and didn't plan to go to the Rose Villas. She knew that it was useless. In this world, only Savanna knew how cold and heartless Brandon was.
After she returned to the Thompson's home, she went to the Splendor Restaurant in the evening. Cain heard that she was out of prison, so he called her. Knowing where she was, Cain immediately came to find her.
as Cain saw Savanna drinking alone, so he asked the waiter to bring him a glass of wine. They drank together, one glass after another.
After two glasses of wine, Cain began to grumble, "Savanna, what bastard is Brandon? He bailed you out but didn't care about you. He didn't allow you to see Mandel."
The moment he knew that Savanna was out of prison, Cain was surprised and happy. But he began to be depressed when knowing why.
To get Savanna, Cain went back to beg his grandfather regardless of his dignity. Cain didn't even hesitate before agreeing to his harsh demands. Cain would marry the woman, Hannah Lampson, daughter of the president of Lampson Ventures. Their marriage had been arranged for a long time.
Brandon was one step ahead before Cain's grandfather made a move. Savanna came out, and Jim's sacrifice was in vain. He couldn't break his promise, so he was furious.
"Savanna, maybe we are not destined to be together."
Savanna drank a bottle of wine and shook her head violently. She laughed heartlessly and tears fell from her eyes. "It's not like that. There's just too much hindrance."
Savanna was drunk. She didn't know what she had said at all.

A faint light shone in from the outside. Savanna's face was fair and tender. Her glass-like eyes stared straight at Cain. Cain's eyes widened, and he quickly made a swallowing motion. He really wanted to bring her home, but reason told him that he could not take advantage of her when she was drunk.
Besides, if Savanna woke up, she would hate him forever.
Cain said, "I'll send you back to your home."
"No." Savanna's red lips pouted. "Go to your house."
Suddenly, Cain felt hot and impatient. He scolded in a low voice, "Savanna, don't tempt me. You know, I am not immune to you!"
Savanna smiled. Her fair, slender fingers traced the outline of a masculine and delicate man. As she watched, Savanna cried. No one knew that her heart was in pain. How good would it be if she didn't love him?

If the man in front of her was him, how good would that be?

Cain knew that Savanna thought of him as another man, and a sour feeling flashed through his heart. He suppressed his emotion, took her hand away, and started the car. "I don't want to go home. I don't want to." Along the way, Savanna kept repeating this sentence.

Cain understood Savanna more than anyone. He changed the route and sent her to the place she wanted to go.

The car went out. Savanna looked at the familiar environment outside the car. Her eyes were bright as she blinked. Her red lips moved. "Why did you bring me here?"

Cain said, "Mandel is inside. Savanna, you should go there!"

Savanna frowned and suddenly shouted, "Send me back to my home."

As she spoke, Savanna grabbed the steering wheel, but Cain grabbed her hand again.

"Savanna, if you miss Mandel, you should go in. You are his mother, and no one can cut off this kinship."

Hearing Cain's words, Savanna was startled. She tilted her head and asked uncertainly, "Can I really see Mandel?"

"Of course."

Savanna got out of the car and staggered toward the Rose Villas.

She pressed the doorbell, but no one came to open the door. Then, she pressed the doorbell with all her strength.

She pressed the doorbell, but no one came to open the door. Then, she pressed the doorbell with all her strength.

In the villa, the doorbell had already woken Mary up. She put on her clothes and came out. From the surveillance video, she saw Savanna outside. Mary was overjoyed. She was about to open the door when a cold voice came from behind her. "If you open the door, you can scam with her."

Mary turned around and saw Brandon was coming down the stairs. She shivered and retracted her hand that was about to open the door.

The doorbell stopped. Mary thought that Savanna had left, but she did not expect to hear an even louder sound. Bang! Bang! Bang!

On the screen, Savanna was waving her arm and slamming the door.

Mary hesitated and whispered, "Mr. Cassel, Ms. Thompson might be missing Mandel. Why don't you..."

Brandon was unmoved. He stared at the screen. When he caught a glimpse of the shadow behind Savanna, his eyes became colder and colder. His expression was bad.

"Go back to your room." Brandon gave Mary these five words.

Mary did not dare to speak and returned to her room.

On the screen, the woman raised her head. Her hair fell from her flushed cheeks, and her eyes were blurring. Obviously, she had drunk too much.

Perhaps she did not get a response for a long time, her calm expression slowly cracked. Savanna began to slam the door crazily and began to curse wildly. "Brandon, open the door. Why don't you let me see Mandel? I gave birth to him. Do you know how painful it was? Brandon, open the door!"

Savanna's voice was helpless and sad, but it still could not shake Brandon's heart. Brandon narrowed his eyes as he stared at the woman. His gaze was fixed on the man's hand that was holding Savanna's shoulder. Suddenly, Brandon's entire body was filled with a cold and ruthless aura.

Savanna lowered her head and buried her head in the man's arms. Her shoulders twitched as if she was crying

On the screen, the woman quickly disappeared.

Brandon walked to the window. Under the enchanting night, that man sent Savanna to the car. The man inadvertently turned his head. His collar was open, and there were obvious red marks on his skin. It was so eye-catching. Brandon's expression changed rapidly. The veins on his forehead were so tight that they seemed to break through his skin. He dialed the number with his phone.

Cain had just placed Savanna on the seat of the car when a Maybach drove over and stopped beside his car.

It was Jim who got out of the car.

Cain glanced at Jim, then at the quiet villa. His lips curled into a sneer. "On the orders of your master, you came to chase us away?"

Jim was silent, his face full of embarrassment. He looked over and saw the woman lying in the back seat of the car through the half-lowered window. Her hair was messy, and her face was hidden in the light and shadow. He couldn't see her expression.

However, Jim felt her low mood.

"Mr. Wilson, it's really too late. The child hasn't been sleeping well for the past two days. He has been crying all the time. It wasn't easy for him to fall asleep. Think about it from another angle."

It was fine if Jim didn't speak, but Cain got angry when he heard this. "Why didn't he think about it in her place?"

Jim stood there motionlessly. He gripped his hair in frustration, got in the car, and drove away.

Cain sent Savanna back to Thompson's house. Seeing that Savanna was extremely drunk and cried and laughed like crazy, Cain was worried about her and did not leave. After waiting for Savanna to sleep, he stayed in the living room for a night.

Savanna woke up, and her head seemed to be about to explode. Scattered memories swirled in her mind.

The door opened and Cain came in again.

Savanna looked at him and said in surprise, "You haven't left yet?"

"You were drunk last night and I was afraid that something would happen to you, so I stayed."

Savanna didn't speak. She sat down on the sofa and stared blankly.

Cain came back after buying breakfast. Seeing Savanna still sitting on the sofa, he frowned. He called a lawyer, and he said to Savanna. "I found this lawyer through my father's connections. He's one of the best lawyers in New York."

Savanna knew that Cain explained it to her because Cain was afraid that she would not accept it. However, Savanna had no choice now. In this situation, she would be very grateful if a lawyer was willing to accept this case.

Seeing that Savanna was silent, Cain knew that she had acquiesced. Then he handed her a portion of the spaghetti. "This is yours. Eat it and we go talk to the lawyer."

Chapter 103

Brandon's gaze fell on the summons. His eyes were deep, dangerous, and sinister. He looked even colder.

Jim thought that Brandon would not go, but when the court was in session, Brandon didn't hesitate at all. He even abandoned his important clients and asked Jim to pick up Jo Max, a famous lawyer from France.

When Jo got in the car, he saw that Brandon was staring at his phone. Jo glanced at it and knew that Brandon was reading the rumors that Savanna had spread last night. Overnight, the news of Brandon's tyrannical seizure of the baby spread throughout the entire New York. The news said that Brandon had forcefully snatched the child away and did not allow Savanna to see the child. On the night when Savanna gave birth to the baby, he did not even allow doctors to deliver Savanna's baby. There were even a few pictures attached. In the first picture, Savanna looked horribly pale and was lying on the big bed, almost bleeding profusely. In the second picture, Savanna was running in the heavy rain in a daze. In the last picture, Brandon was leaning his head against Winnie's neck under the night sky as if he was kissing her. The time in the picture showed that it was a year ago.

Needless to say, Brandon had cheated on Savanna and abused Savanna. After divorcing Brandon, Savanna had a baby, while Brandon took away the kid by force. The news was logically reasonable and hit the nail on the head, which shocked Brandon a lot.

Needless to say, Savanna played the weak and incited public opinion. With the support of the public, no matter how strong a public relations team Brandon had, or how strong his lawyers were, perhaps, the final result would be a failure.

Brandon browsed through the message and asked, "What are the odds of winning the case?"

Jo knew that Brandon had watched the news and was in a bad mood. He patted his chest and replied, "Don't worry, I promise to make your ex-wife kneel and beg for your mercy."

Brandon seemed to be very agitated. He lit a cigarette and smoked silently.

As soon as the car arrived at the entrance to the court, Brandon was bombarded with a flood of questions. "Mr. Cassel, is the news true?"

"To snatch the baby, are you really so shameless?"

Jim quickly got out of the car and stood in front of Brandon. He shouted at the reporters, "No comment."

Another car drove over quickly and stopped. Savanna and Cain got off from both sides. The reporters immediately surrounded them. "Ms. Thompson, how confident are you to win today's case?"

Savanna was about to speak when she felt the cold glare opposite. Brandon's handsome face was shrouded in coldness. Even though she was standing so far away, she could feel the strong coldness emanating from him.

Especially when his gaze swept over Cain, who was behind her, his cold eyes seemed to be covered with a layer of ice.

A Bentley and a Maybach drove over in a chase. As soon as the Bentley stopped, the Maybach also stalled. Giselle, who got out of the Bentley, looked irritable and was cursing something. Her fierce eyes occasionally fell on the mother and son who got out of the Maybach.

It was Terri and Kady. n.

Kady. n supported Terri. The mother and son looked at Giselle and Brandon with a hint of schadenfreude.

e see

Giselle was about to go inside, but she seemed to be so angry that she pointed at the Bentley and shouted at Terri and Kady. n, "If you don't fix the car, you won't have a peaceful life."

While they were on the road, the Maybach suddenly rushed up and hit the Bentley, where Giselle was sitting. The hit was not strong, but it still scratched the right side of the Bentley. Seeing that it was Kady. n's car, Giselle was so angry that she accused Terri and Kady. n of doing it intentionally.

Terri kept apologizing.

If not for the fear of missing the session, Giselle would have fought with Terri long ago.

"Good thing that it's insured."

Terri did not seem to want to cause trouble and seemed to be a little afraid of Brandon.

She walked to Brandon and said softly, "Brandon, your father is busy. So he asked us to come here on his behalf."

Brandon compressed his lips and did not say a word.

And when he saw Kady. n greeting Savanna, he was burning with jealousy.

After a few deep breaths, he finally suppressed the raging jealousy.

He entered the court, and the iciness on his handsome face lingered for a long time.

Savanna and Cain followed him.

In the court, the dignified judge sat on the stage, quietly listening to the verbal battle between the lawyers of both sides. Jo, an illustrious lawyer from France, was having a verbal battle with Jason, the most eminent lawyer in New York, just for a small case of baby snatching. Everyone listened carefully, not daring to breathe loudly, Jason said that the baby was too young to lack mother's care, and his client, Savanna, often suffered from Brandon's cold violence, even cheating in their marriage, which caused great mental damage to her.

The baby was born after the divorce. On the day of delivery, Savanna gave birth to a boy in an extremely dangerous situation. The defendant, Brandon, was not worthy of being a father. Naturally, he should not have the right to be a father.

OUS

After Jason finished his statement, it was the defense lawyer's turn to make his statement.

Jo rose to his feet and began to state, "First of all, my client, Brandon, was forced to marry the plaintiff, Savanna. Before their marriage, there was nothing wrong with him loving someone else. If we wanted to pursue the matter, to some extent, the plaintiff should be regarded as the culprit who destroyed Brandon's happiness. She is the so-called third wheel. On the day of the delivery, it was the plaintiff who planned to take the baby away. Afterward, she hid the child. With just a few words and a few videos as evidence, Jo made Jason speechless.

When they were at loggerheads, the judge solemnly ordered a short adjournment.

In the lounge, Jason slammed the documents on the table with a crack.

His face was ashen and his tone was stern as he questioned Savanna, "Why didn't you tell me that you ran away and hid the child?"

Savanna immediately panicked. Her face paled, and she asked nervously, "Is it serious?"

She had intended to tell Jason about it, but Cain stopped her and said it was better not to let Jason know. So, she chose not to say it.

Jason said, "If they don't let go of this matter, it's serious. By the way, just in terms of background, you are not Brandon's match."

It was clearly the first time Jason had been defeated, and he was in a terrible mood.

Jason took a deep breath and said, "Fortunately, Mandel is still a suckling baby. We still have public opinion favoring us. The weak are always pitied by the public. Cain, go spread more news. The more furious the public grows, the more likely we will win,"

"Alright," Cain replied as his hands began to move on the screen of his phone.

In order to help Savanna, Cain paid a high price to hire a large number of Internet trolls to slander

Brandon, whose scandals were thoroughly searched.

Savanna's thoughts were a mess. Jason said that she could only pin hope on public opinion, which meant that her hope of taking Mandel back was extremely slim.

However, after meeting his gaze for a second, Savanna lost. Just as she was about to flee helter-skelter, Brandon coldly snorted, "I underestimated you. Savanna, so many men revolve around you. Are you proud?"

Savanna had wanted to leave, but after hearing his words, she immediately raised his head and straightened her back. "Compared to you, I'm far too inferior. You can't even count the number of girls you have with your hands, right?"

Brandon looked at her and smiled. "Are you jealous?"

"Jealous?"

The smile in Savanna's eyes was tinged with mockery.

"Brandon, don't overestimate yourself. I, Savanna, will never be jealous of you in this life."

Brandon was about to leave when Brandon stood up straight and immediately blocked her way. He looked down at her with a somewhat judgmental gaze. "Are you blaming me for not trusting you?"

Brandon's voice sounded a little angry.

"Is it about Winnie?"

Savanna smiled. She felt that Brandon was a little funny. "If you don't believe in me, I won't trust you either. We are birds of a feather, so how can I be jealous?"

Brandon focused his gaze on her face, and his smile faded away. His expression was unprecedentedly solemn.

"On the night of Winnie's death, you seduced me and asked, 'Who is more charming, you or she?' Savanna, tell me, at that time, did you kill her?"

Brandon's hoarse voice was like a sharp blade, cutting Savanna's ears and nerves.

Her brain was buzzing even harder. Suddenly, she had a severe headache. She covered her head and cried out in pain.

Brandon saw this and wanted to reach out to help her. But on second thought, he put his hand back into his pocket and said coldly, "Stop pretending. There is no one here. You are only temporarily released. The case has not been closed. If you continue to mess with me, I have to put you in prison."

Savanna endured the pain, raised her head, and tried her best to stare at him. The veins on her

Savanna endured the pain, raised her head, and tried her best to stare at him. The veins on her

Savanna gritted her teeth in anger. "Your words will appear in the court trial later." Brandon forced a bitter smile and said indifferently, "Even if you took away Mandel, you are not able to raise him. Why take the trouble to do that?"

After saying that, Brandon no longer looked at Savanna. He put out the cigarette, walked past her directly, and left.

At the end of the rest, everyone returned to their original seats. Jason used public opinion to attack Brandon. As Jason expected, Jo claimed that Savanna, the plaintiff, was not as financially advantageous as Brandon, the defendant. Moreover, when Savanna took care of Mandel, he had been in danger twice. Jo accused Savanna of not having the ability to take care of the baby. In addition, he also pointed out that Savanna was an imprisoned murder suspect and was temporarily bailed out by Brandon, the plaintiff. Now that Savanna was a murder suspect, how could she take care of the baby?

Savanna looked at Jo and listened to his sharp words. Suddenly, Savanna felt that she couldn't hear anything. She only saw Mandel wave his chubby little arms, reveal his small, toothless mouth, and smile sweetly at her, but his smile immediately disappeared. In an instant, he cried. His crystal-like transparent tears stung Savanna's heart.

By the time she came back to her senses, the judge had announced to retire. Everyone walked out of the court one after another.

Giselle came over and was about to say something to Savanna, but Savanna's eyes fell on Brandon, who was not far away. Brandon turned around and brushed away the dust on his sleeves, about to leave.

Savanna rushed over and grabbed his hand.

Her lips opened and closed, and after a long time, she squeezed out a sentence.

"Brandon, let's resume our marriage."

No one thought that Savanna would make such a move, and everyone was stunned in place.

But Savanna knew that for the sake of her baby, she had no choice, Brandon did not expect Savanna to run over and say such words to him. He was stunned and looked at Savanna, His eyes gradually became cold. He pulled his hand out of Savanna's and strode out.

Jim glanced at Savanna, his eyes filled with sympathy.

Savanna, who rushed to the door, saw that Brandon was about to get into the Cayenne. She rushed over and put her arms around Brandon's leg tightly. She said, "Brandon, I agree to remarry! I won't sue!"

Brandon instinctively wanted to reach out to help Savanna, but Cain rushed over. He bent down to help Savanna. Savanna refused to get up. Cain glared at Brandon, but Brandon just smiled coldly.

Brandon was gloomy. He shook off Savanna's hand and coldly said, "Why should we remarry?"

"It's too late! I don't want your love anymore!"

Then Brandon got into the car.

The car started, and the exhaust sprayed Savanna's face. However, Savanna did not care. She started to chase the car. The reporters all photographed her back, but she did not care!

Savanna burst into tears and suddenly fell. She knelt on the ground in a sorry state.

Cain glared at the reporters as he ran over and reached out to help Savanna.

Crack! Cain's outstretched hand was pushed away. He looked up and saw a calm face.

It was Savanna's mother-in-law, Giselle, who was suppressing her anger.

Giselle helped Savanna up and bent down to help Savanna remove the dust on her trousers.

"Savanna, you are so pitiful. Brandon is ruthless."

Giselle looked in the direction of the voice and saw Kadyr with a malicious look. He was standing in front of the reporters. He looked at Savanna but spoke to the reporters.

"Hypocrite!" Giselle snorted. She rolled her eyes at Kadyr and glared at Terri behind Kadyr.

Giselle helped Savanna up to Bentley when Cain rushed over. But he was stopped by Giselle. Giselle asked in a cold tone, "What do you want to do?"

Cain cared about Savanna so much. His eyes were firmly fixed on Savanna's pale face. Then he said gloomily, "She doesn't want to go with you. Let her down."

Giselle sneered. She glanced at Cain contemptuously, turned around, and sat in the passenger seat.

The car slowly started and drove away.

Cain looked at the departing Bentley with mixed feelings.

The car drove to the Rose Villas. Savanna looked at the familiar environment outside the car and suddenly came back to her senses. There was a light in her eyes. She got out of the car and ran to open the car door for Giselle.

Giselle got out of the car. Seeing Savanna, whose face was full of tears, Giselle sighed and said, Giselle was angry about the case that Savanna wanted to take Mandel away by law. In her opinion, there was no need to go to court, for she thought going to court only made them a laughing stock for others.

Savanna obediently stood in place with her head lowered. Without saying a word, Savanna looked so sad. Seeing this, Giselle added, "They want to laugh at us. Kadyr and Terri were so proud."

Recalling the schadenfreude on Kadyr's face just now, Giselle was very unhappy. This time, she resented Savanna.

Savanna grabbed Giselle's sleeve and said in a hoarse voice, "Giselle, can you tell Brandon that I don't want to go to court?"

Giselle looked at her for a long time and said nothing.

After a long time, Giselle said, "Savanna, I'm not happy either, let alone Brandon. You can see Mandel at any time. You were put in prison before. Even though Brandon was unhappy, he still helped you out. However, you came out and found a lover to make Brandon sad. You even conspired with him to take Mandel away. I can't stand it, let alone Brandon."

This time, Giselle did not stand by Savanna.

Just now, Giselle saw Cain come over to help Savanna. Seeing Cain's distressed expression and passionate gaze on Savanna, Giselle wanted to slap Cain.

Giselle thought, Brandon has always been a proud person. How could he bear it?

Giselle felt sorry for Brandon.

Giselle spoke as she walked into the villa. However, she could not hear any footsteps behind her. So Giselle stopped and turned around. She saw Savanna standing in the same place with a pale and sad face. Savanna was staring at somewhere in the villa sadly.

Giselle followed her gaze and saw the brightest light on the second floor. That was Mandel's room.

Giselle sighed again. She shouted, "Follow me."

Seeing that Savanna was still motionless, Giselle was a little anxious. She reminded Savanna, "Didn't you say you didn't want to go to court? His car is here, so he should be back. You two can talk about it in person."

Seeing that Savanna finally took a step forward, Giselle was relieved. She nagged, "I am worried. Why can't you live a good life?"

Giselle bent over and pressed her ear against the door to listen. She could not hear any sound. Giselle raised her hand and knocked on the door as she asked, "Brandon, it is me. Can I come in?"

There was no response. The room was silent.

Giselle pushed open the door and saw that the ground was a mess. The furniture in the room was almost destroyed, which made Giselle feel scared.

Giselle looked up and saw Brandon sitting in a chair with a cigarette between his fingers. The smoke blurred the outline of his face, but Giselle could feel the gloom all over his body.

Giselle deliberately looked at Brandon's face and hands. There was not a trace of red marks on them. Only then did Giselle relax.

Brandon knew that they had come in, but he did not look at them. Instead, he just sat there and smoked, completely immersed in his thoughts.

Giselle muttered, "I must have committed crimes in my previous life, and that's why I met you two."

Giselle turned around and went out. Seeing Savanna's wooden face, Giselle winked at Savanna. "What are you waiting for? What did you just say to me? Tell him!"

Giselle pushed Savanna, and Savanna stumbled two steps forward.

The door was closed. Giselle's voice sounded, "You care about each other, but you torment each other. Why?"

The sound of footsteps faded away. Giselle walked away. Problems in an intimate relationship are bound to be solved by the two in it rather than others. Giselle knew this very well, so Giselle left the space to them and let them solve it themselves.

In the room, the atmosphere was stagnant. They could hear each other's breathing. Suddenly, Brandon extinguished the cigarette. He got up and walked out. When he passed Savanna, Savanna reached out and grabbed his clothes. Savanna was gentle because she was afraid of angering him.

The mess on the ground indicated that Brandon was in a rage.

Brandon lowered his head, and he stared at Savanna's hand that was holding his clothes. His eyes darkened as he said, "Let go."

Savanna did not move. She maintained the same posture for a long time. Finally, she said in a hoarse voice, "Brandon, I can't live without Mandel."

"You want to stay?" Brandon asked in a calm voice as if he was not the one who had just smashed things out of anger.

Savanna nodded.

"You like me?" Savanna repeated. It seemed that she was extremely sad that she could not breathe. Then, the smile on her face widened. Savanna said sarcastically,

"Brandon, you like me? You say you like me, but you want to strangle me, right?"

Savanna thought, how can a man who wanted to strangle me like me?

I killed the woman he loved the most, so he immediately took Mandel away from me. He let me bear the pain of being separated from my son.

Brandon wanted to strangle Savanna. It was not because of Winnie's death but because of her distrust of him. Savanna wanted to take Mandel away from him. To achieve this goal, Savanna did not hesitate to sue Brandon, which humiliated Brandon. Brandon thought, I considered everything for her. Even if she committed a capital offense, I did not hesitate to use all my connections I did not want to use to bail her out. She is ruthless.

The more she wants to escape from me, the more I will not give her the chance!

She wants my son to call someone else 'father'! No way!

I will never allow it unless I die!

Brandon said, "I don't want a woman who takes the initiative to be my woman. Such a woman is very cheap!"

Savanna thought, I am just a bitch. If not, I wouldn't have fallen in love with him! I wouldn't have suffered a lot!

Seeing that Brandon was about to go out, Savanna panicked. She grabbed his arm and kissed him.

Brandon tilted his head, so she could only kiss his neck. Savanna saw his rolling Adam's apple. Although Savanna felt that Brandon was on the verge of anger, she did not care. She turned his head and kissed his lips hard.

As they kissed, Brandon felt a desire, but he suppressed that desire. He pushed her away.

Savanna fell out. Her back hit the corner of the chair, and her face turned pale. When the pain subsided, Savanna looked up and found that Brandon was gone.

Savanna chased after Brandon.

Giselle was standing in the corridor and shouting for Brandon in front of her. Hearing footsteps, Giselle turned around and saw Savanna's pale face. Giselle knew that they quarreled again.

Giselle wanted to ask Savanna, but at that moment, Savanna didn't have time to talk to Giselle.

Savanna was anxious to chase after Brandon.

Giselle closed her eyes. She was anxious and angry.

When Giselle calmed down and went out of the villa, she happened to see Savanna pulling Brandon.

Brandon wanted to leave, but Savanna stopped him. Savanna stood by the car.

Giselle didn't know what Savanna was talking about. Savanna's attitude was humble.

She should be begging for Brandon. However, Brandon was cold. He didn't even look at Savanna.

This scene made Giselle feel very sad.

Giselle thought of herself many years ago. Giselle thought, Savanna is the same as me!

When I begged Harris not to leave, I was as sad as Savanna. I was so humble at that time, but Harris still left without hesitation.

Asas

When Brandon was a child, I taught him not to be a ruthless person, but I gave birth to such a ruthless person. He is like his father.

Brandon looked more and more like Harris. An unprecedented hatred filled up Giselle's mind. She suppressed the surging hatred in her heart. Giselle noticed the change in her emotions. She quickly took out a pill and swallowed it.

When Giselle came to her senses, she only saw the Cayenne fading away.

Standing still with a dull look on her pale face, Savanna looked like a doll made of glass. Giselle felt pain in her heart. She walked forward and wiped the tears from the corners of Savanna's eyes. Giselle said, "He is like his father. He is also stubborn."

Savanna looked in the direction where the car went, and her whole body seemed to have been drained of strength. She suddenly became weak.

"Mom, I don't want to lose Mandel."

Giselle was very happy to hear what Savanna said. Giselle said, "Remarry! If you don't want to leave Mandel, remarry Brandon."

Unable to suppress the joy in her heart, Giselle repeated the words several times.

Savanna was depressed. She held her face and tears flowed from her fingers. Savanna said, "He didn't agree. He didn't want me anymore."

Just now, Savanna put down her pride and begged Brandon, but Brandon didn't even look at her.

To remarry Brandon, Savanna even pleased and kissed him.

Savanna had no choice but to do so for Mandel.

"It's okay. He is my son. I know he still loves you, but he refuses to admit it!"

Giselle took Savanna's hands and brought her into the Rose Villas again.

Giselle said, "You live here, and I will move here too. If he doesn't remarry you, I won't let him come back."

Giselle's attitude made Savanna feel gratified. She thought Giselle was the best mother-in-law in the world.

In the evening, Justin brought Savanna's luggage. Debbie also sent Giselle's clothes.

Savanna decided to live in the Rose Villas.

Savanna worried that Brandon would ask Jim to drive her away, but until the next morning, she had not seen Jim.

Brandon did not appear for several days. Cain called Savanna and asked if Brandon did anything bad to her. Savanna told Cain that she might have to stay in the Rose Villas for Mandel. Recently, she was especially grateful for Cain's help.

Cain said, "You are my friend. It is my pleasure to help you."

Although Savanna moved into the Rose Villas, she didn't withdraw the case for Mandel's custody.

On the day of the sentence, Savanna called Jason when she went. Jason said that he had already set Savanna called Jason many times. At first, the phone was busy, but later it was turned off. Just as Savanna was anxious, the judge had been impatient. Her majestic voice rang, "The plaintiff's lawyer doesn't show up after the trial time. He is in contempt of the court. As for this case, the plaintiff is entangled with cases and poor. I declare that the supporting right of Mandel Cassel belongs to Brandon Cassel. Withdraw from the court."

The judge got up and left.

Savanna pushed aside the people in front of her and rushed over, wanting to grab the female judge's arm, but Savanna was stopped by the police.

Savanna called Jason again.

Jason's call was no longer connected.

She returned to the Rose Villas. Debbie and Mary were taking a bath for Mandel.

Savanna leaned against the door frame and looked at Mandel in the bathtub. His little body was full of white foam. He heard her footsteps, so he looked at her. His black and clear eyes blinked with a bright smile.

It was this smile that made Savanna miss Mandel so much in prison.

Mary took water to wash off the foam on Mandel's body. Mandel's tender skin was exposed. Savanna walked up and couldn't help but take a bath for Mandel.

Mary and Debbie called out to her at the same time. Then, the two looked at each other and quietly left the bathroom.

Savanna washed Mandel very carefully. She picked up Mandel. Regardless of the water on Mandel's body wetting her clothes, she dried Mandel's body and carried Mandel back to the room. Savanna knew that she lived here temporarily, and the custody of Mandel had been given to Brandon. As long as Brandon wanted, she would have to separate from Mandel. Downstairs, Debbie was talking with Mary. "Savanna seems to be in a bad mood." Debbie looked upstairs and was a little worried. Mary was even more anxious. She said, "The custody of Mandel has been given to Mr. Cassel. How can Ms. Thompson be in a good mood?" Giselle overheard their conversation.

Chapter 107

In the evening, Savanna received Cain's call and her mood became worse. Cain told her that the reason why Jason did not appear at the court was that Jason was in trouble. A few days ago, Jason slept with a woman and she sued him for rape. When Jason rushed to the court today, he was caught by the police. In short, Jason was sued by a woman.

It happened at the critical moment.

Savanna smiled mockingly. She once used it on others before. Now, Brandon used it to deal with her.

Savanna was pretty sure that Brandon did it.

At the Night nightclub

Ben and Bob each had a girl in their arms and did what they wanted. They almost had sex there.

The woman in Ben's arms raised her head and fluttered her long eyelashes. She said in a sweet voice, "I'll go to the bathroom. Ben, wait a minute."

Ben looked at the girl walking to the bathroom. She was tall and curvy. He was turned on.

Ben lit a cigarette and looked at the sofa. He saw that Brandon was sitting there, Brandon's entire body hidden in the light. Ben could not see the expression on Brandon's face at all. But Ben knew that Brandon was in a bad mood.

When Brandon was in a bad mood, he would ask Ben and Bob out to accompany him. But it was better to put it in another way.

Every time, Brandon would call over many girls. Ben and Bob would pick their girls, but Brandon would not want any of them. Brandon would just sit there and drink. If a woman came over, he would chase her away.

As time went by, all the girls in the Night nightclub knew Brandon's temper, so they kept their distance from Brandon.

“Brandon, you have got the child. There is nothing to worry about, isn't it?” Ben asked Brandon.

Brandon didn't say anything. He just kept silent and smoked.

W

Just as Ben was about to say something, he heard a phone ring. It was not Ben's phone. The next second, Ben saw Brandon take out his phone from his pocket and walk to the door with a cigarette.

Just as the girl came out of the bathroom, Ben immediately went up to her and they began to kiss and cuddle.

Brandon found a quiet place. Just as he answered the phone, he heard someone say, “Mr. Cassel, we found Betty's body. It was salvaged from the water. It was so rotten that her face couldn't be seen

Brandon took a puff of his cigarette, and smoke came out of his nostrils. “Are there any other clues?”

The man hesitated for two seconds and said, “The police said that before Betty died, the only people she met were Winnie and Savanna. Winnie died. The suspicion falls on Savanna.”

Brandon exchanged a few more words with that guy and hung up.

Ben was having a good time with the girl when he saw from the corners of his eyes that Brandon pushed the door and came in. Seeing that Brandon didn't look good, Ben immediately left the girl and went over. “Brandon, what's wrong?”

Brandon waved his hand and signaled Ben to continue what he was doing. The girl also came over. Ben pulled her into his arms. They began to laugh again. After a while, they rolled around on the sofa.

Brandon turned a blind eye to what they were doing and smoked several cigarettes.

He raised his wrist to look at the watch. It was one in the morning.

On the spur of the moment, he asked Ben to pay the bill and left the Night nightclub.

Then they found another place to play cards.

Maybe it was because there was something on his mind, Brandon had bad luck. He also pulled a long face. In the end, Ben and Bob did not dare to play the cards anymore. It was dawn.

They left and went to have breakfast before going home.

Brandon had just entered the house when Giselle came over. Brandon reeked of smoke and alcohol. Giselle also noticed the lipstick mark on his shirt. She was furious. “Do you know what you are doing?”

Giselle was so angry that she slapped her son on the shoulder. The relationship between Brandon and Savanna was so intense and he still stayed outside for a night.

Giselle thought of the days when Harris was messing around. Her eyes turned red and she said with a choked voice, “Brandon, do you really want your family to fall apart?”

Seeing that Giselle wanted to lecture him again, Brandon raised his eyebrows and asked, "Where is she?"

Giselle looked up at the stairs, "She probably hasn't woken up yet. When she came back yesterday, she held Mandel in her arms and refused to let go. She hates to leave her child. If you ever think about your child, remarry her."

Giselle did not say anything and turned back to the room.

Brandon did not return to the room but went to the study room. In a moment, Debbie took out a shirt.

"Mr. Cassel, Mrs. Cassel said that you can change your clothes if you don't go up to take a bath."

Debbie went out.

Brandon looked at the clean white shirt in front of him and then looked down at his collar. There was indeed a red mark on it. It should be the lipstick that was accidentally rubbed on when the girl came to Ben.

Savanna would not care about it at all.

Brandon felt that it was unnecessary to change it.

He laughed at himself.

He clicked into his email box and read emails. After finishing his work, he left the study room and returned to his room. It was empty.

Brandon reached out and touched the neatly folded quilt. He could still feel the lingering heat on it.

Finally, his intense emotions were relaxed.

He entered the bathroom, took off his clothes, and turned on the shower. The warm water made him feel less exhausted.

Mary and Debbie were feeding the baby. Savanna went back to the room to get diapers.

As soon as she entered the room, she saw Brandon's clothes on the bed. His suit and tie were thrown on the bed randomly.

The sound of water splashing could be heard from the bathroom.

The man whom she had not seen for a long time returned.

Savanna took the diaper and was about to go out when she suddenly thought of something and returned to the room. She was torn.

Suddenly, the door opened.

Savanna's heart also raced as she heard the sound of the door opening.

Brandon looked up and saw Savanna, who stood beside the door motionless. Brandon didn't know if she had just come in or if she was going out.

He took the towel and casually wiped his hair.

He took off the towel around his waist and put on clean clothes. Seeing that Savanna stood there stiffly for a while and was about to leave, he called out to her, "Let's talk."

Savanna replied, "Alright."

"Betty's body was found." Brandon's voice was cold and didn't betray any emotion.

Since Betty was mentioned, Savanna became alert.

When Savanna heard that Betty's body was found, her heart sank.

Brandon knew that she was nervous since Savanna did not say anything.

"You should know what it means, right?"

"I didn't kill her." Savanna raised her head and looked straight at Brandon. There seemed to be tears in her eyes. "Brandon, please believe me."

"I believe you, but the police won't."

Brandon suppressed the urge to pull her into his arms to comfort her. Instead, he lit a cigarette and walked to the window, looking at the brightly lit buildings outside.

He seemed to think of something. He closed his eyes, looking torn and in pain.

"Savanna, Winnie died very miserably. If you saw that scene, you would also be shocked."

Savanna did not want to quarrel with him, but when she heard this, she couldn't help but argue, "I'm afraid you are more than shocked. You are heartbroken. Brandon, you said you believed me. but when have you ever truly believed me?"

Savanna asked sadly and bitterly. She looked upset and lonely.

"Then, have you ever believed in me?" Brandon turned around and looked at her sharply.

Savanna smiled. "Right, we have never trusted each other. I don't even know why I gave birth to Mandel."

Without Mandel, all the problems today would not exist. At any time, she could leave this demonic man without any burden.

She said she regretted having children with him. She regretted giving birth to Mandel.

Brandon did not want to lose his temper, but in the end, he still could not hold back his anger. "If you don't want me to be the father of your child, then who?"

"Cain?"

Chapter 108

"Brandon, why aren't you going to die?"

This sentence was like a curse, torturing Brandon badly. She hated him so much that she wanted him to die.

Brandon's expression was cold and terrifying.

The veins on his forehead bulged.

In a time of grief, she said the most hurtful thing.

"Yes," he admitted.

"The woman who pestered Jason was a hooker that I hired. Savanna, since you regret giving birth to Mandel, why do you try to take Mandel away from me?"

Brandon stared at Savanna, his eyes slowly turning red. "Even if you win, what do you have to raise him? Your unstable Thompson Group?"

Brandon looked down on her like this, and the words he said were like sharp blades, stabbing straight into the depths of Savanna's heart.

She desperately swallowed the pain, and she stroked the wall to support her powerless body.

She glared at Brandon and straightened her back. "I know that you have always looked down on me, but I swear that I will take good care of the Thompson Group and let it regain its former glory."

Brandon scoffed and repeated in amusement, "Its former glory?"

"Has the Thompson Group been glorious?"

"David sells his daughter for money in order to save the Thompson Group. Savanna, these words can be said at home but not outside. People who know the inside story will laugh."

Brandon's heartless words hurt Savanna's heart.

Perhaps surprised by Brandon's words, she looked at Brandon's expression with pain. That pain gradually turned into confusion. Then, she laughed a few times, tears rolling out of her eyes and blurring her vision.

Brandon said that her father sold her and her mother for money. In Brandon's heart, that was how he had always thought of her father.

However, Savanna knew that her father was not such a person.

Unable to suppress the pain in her heart, Savanna growled, "Don't slander my father!"

Savanna gritted her teeth. "Brandon, you don't have the right to say that to him!"

"My brother is right."

Tracy's voice came from outside, and then she appeared.

She swept her eyes over Savanna, and her gaze shifted to Brandon's face. Tracy's expression seemed to be infatuated, but it was fleeting, making it difficult to capture.

"Back then, when you married into the Cassel family, my mother gave 150 million dollars to David. If not for that money, the Thompson Group would have gone bankrupt. David took the money from the Cassel family to keep his lover. In the end, he squandered all the money, and the Thompson Group still collapsed."

150 million dollars?

This number caused Savanna to widen her eyes in shock.

It took Savanna a long time to regain her consciousness. Her tone changed when she roared at Tracy, "My dad is not that kind of person. I don't believe it. You are lying!

Brandon, you'd better take good care of your sister! We are divorced now. If she slanders my dad again, I will find a lawyer to sue her!"

Brandon didn't expect that Tracy would come in, much less that she would say that.

Brandon didn't want to hurt Savanna.

He scratched his hair in frustration and shouted at Tracy, "Get out!"

However, Tracy didn't listen to him. She glanced at him and continued, "My mother doted on you and spoiled you, Savanna. Don't think that you are a great contributor just because you have a child with my brother. The women who want to have a child with my brother can line up and encircle New York City.”

“Shut up. If you say another word, I will beat you up!” Brandon didn’t allow Tracy to say another word.

When Tracy saw that Brandon was angry at her, she immediately cried, “You always scold me. Look at how you’ve spoiled her. She’s about to ruin our family. What I said was the truth. 150 million dollars is earned with difficulty by our family. This woman, she’s not worth it at all!”

The sound of a slap was heard.

Tracy had a fresh mark on her face.

As if Tracy couldn’t believe it, she stared at Brandon in a daze.

Brandon realized that he had hit his sister. Regret flashed across his face. Suddenly, he pursed his lips and stopped talking.

Savanna stood still and did not move. The dense pain wrapped around her heart.

Two minutes later, Brandon came back. Seeing Savanna’s pale face, he lowered his eyes and ignored the pain in his heart. His words were apologetic. “That’s Tracy’s personality. Don’t take her words to heart.”

“When we got married, did the Cassel family really give 150 million dollars to the Thompson Group?”

Brandon didn’t know how to answer Savanna.

After all, back then, the Cassel family indeed gave the Thompson Group 150 million, and it was David who asked for it.

However, Brandon would not tell the truth to Savanna. He was too angry earlier, so he lost his mind and accidentally spoke it out.

Right now, he was so regretful that he wanted to die.
was so

“It’s nothing, Savanna. I was so angry that I didn’t know what to say.”

Savanna recalled something in her mind. Two years ago, David had asked Savanna to go on a blind date. Savanna refused and told David that she had fallen in love with someone.

Not long after, Giselle came to the house and was very satisfied to see Savanna. She took Savanna’s hand and said that she wanted Savanna to be her daughter-in-law.

Savanna had always known that the son of Giselle was Brandon.

Giselle personally promised to let Savanna marry Brandon. Savanna was extremely happy at that time and even invited Giselle to have lunch.

The next day, Giselle arranged a dinner party. Brandon left after a short while. Savanna did not have time to say a word to him. In short, Brandon was very dissatisfied with Savanna and almost did not look at her directly.

Later, she found out that Brandon had Winnie in his heart and swore that he would not marry unless it was Winnie in this life.

Savanna thought she had no chance. Unexpectedly, that night, David called her into the study. David held her hand so excitedly that his hands were shaking. He asked, “You really want to marry Brandon?”

“Yes.” At that time, Savanna’s cheeks were burning hot, and she almost did not dare to look David in the eyes.

Brandon?”

“Yes.” At that time, Savanna’s cheeks were burning hot, and she almost did not dare to look David in the eyes.

“Savanna, you are really my good daughter. The Cassel family has agreed. Choose a suitable day, and you can marry Brandon.”

Like a dream, Savanna had been immersed in happiness.

But Savanna didn’t notice David’s expression at all. Now that she thought about it, David seemed to have been too excited at the time. Needless to say, he had probably received 150 million dollars.

And she knew nothing about the trade between the Thompson Group and the Cassel Group...

Someone called Brandon. The matter seemed to be a little urgent. Brandon declined, and it called again. Brandon finally picked up the phone and left helplessly. Before leaving, he looked at Savanna’s little face and frowned worriedly.

“Something happened at the company. I have to deal with it first. Don’t think too much. Anyway, it’s all in the past.”

With that, he left in a hurry.

That day, Savanna did not say a word all day.

What Tracy had said haunted Savanna. She kept thinking, am I David’s means of income?

David sold his daughter for money just to protect the Thompson Group.

Has the Thompson Group been glorious?

Tracy’s and Brandon’s words appeared in her dreams, causing her to wake up from her nightmare in a cold sweat. Savanna stood in front of the floor-to-ceiling window and looked at the shadow of the woman on the glass. The woman’s face was as pale as her lips, and her bright eyes seemed to be covered in a layer of light gray. She was no longer as lively and charming as before. Her black hair draped over her shoulders, making her look like a ghost.

Turning back, she looked at the familiar Mandel on the bed. She turned around and slowly walked over. Her fingertips gently stroked the child’s pink little face. Tears fell on the baby’s little face, and Mandel’s tender face was sparkling.

Her phone vibrated. In fear of waking up the baby, Savanna would turn the phone into silent mode before sleeping every night,

She wiped away the tears on her face, tidied up her emotions, and clicked the answer button. “Hello.”

Chapter 109

Savanna got changed and drove away from the Rose Villas. She headed straight for the Thompson

Group

At this moment, the top floor of the Thompson Group was brightly lit. Neil and Justin sat in the office waiting for Savanna. At the sight of her, they immediately got up.

Neil brought the agreement to Savanna.

Savanna lowered her eyes. After reading the agreement, Savanna frowned. She looked at the agreement again and could not find any loopholes at all. It meant that this was long premeditated.

Savanna became helpless and slipped into the chair, and she stared at the signature on the agreement.

It was David's signature. Savanna recognized this handwriting, and it was not a forgery. Dave had such an agreement. It meant that Betty and Savanna's father did have an affair.

"Ms. Thompson, what should we do?" Neil asked anxiously when he saw her pale face. Savanna didn't know what to say at that moment.

Justin smoked one cigarette after another. He seemed to be unable to figure it out no matter how hard he racked his brains.

David was really ruthless.

In his mind, he never regarded Savanna as his daughter.

However, she was his biological daughter.

But in David's eyes, Savanna was not as important as his lover, and Savanna felt very hurt.

It was very late at night. Savanna asked Neil and Justin to go home, while they were worried and reluctant to leave. After Savanna urged them repeatedly, they finally left.

In the empty office, Savanna was alone, sitting there quietly. She looked out the window at the starry sky, and she gradually felt bitter.

Suddenly, her mother's smile appeared in her mind.

When Savanna was ten years old, her mother, Krissa, passed away in a car accident.

The night before the accident, Savanna woke up from her sleep and seemed to hear a quarrel in the living room.

Savanna sneaked downstairs and saw her parents arguing in the living room. They were both furious and said many bitter words.

IS

It was mainly about how David accused Krissa of letting him down, saying that she had fallen in love with someone.

But Krissa denied it and replied that she only loved David since they got married.

With that in mind, Savanna hung up the phone and called Justin.

Early in the morning, Justin hurried over.

Justin turned to Savanna and said, "Ms. Thompson, I've checked. Before your parents got married, your mother did like another man called Frank Davis. And the night before the car accident, Frank met your mother at the hotel."

Savanna's lips were pale, and she looked very serious. Given that, Justin said carefully, "That night, someone took a picture of them and sent it to David."

David could not tolerate the betrayal of his wife, so it was very likely that he had murdered Krissa.

As for this case, in the past, it seemed to be an accident.

It was not difficult to explain why David kept Betty because he hated Krissa. Thus, he took revenge on Krissa.

David even wanted to retaliate against his daughter.

"Check if my mother's death has anything to do with David," Savanna said with her eyes closed. It could be seen how painful she felt.

It turned out that her parents, who had loved each other for a long time, were hostile to each other.

More importantly, David sold Savanna to the Cassel family. He gave his lover the money the Cassel Group gave him. Moreover, David gave his lover the Thompson Group. But David thought these moves weren't enough to retaliate against Krissa.

Therefore, David targeted Savanna and plotted against her happiness.

if David hadn't died, Justin would definitely have rushed over and killed him.

Unless Savanna wasn't his biological daughter, otherwise David wouldn't be so bad to her.

An hour later, Justin sent a message. "David asked someone to break the tire of your mother's car."

The fact was that Savanna's father had killed her mother. Savanna became depressed. She was very helpless.

At noon, Dave brought someone over. He barged into the office and said to Savanna with a fake

"Ms. Thompson, this agreement was signed by your father. He said that if the total value of the Thompson Group is not over 150 million dollars, it will be transferred to my sister unconditionally. This may be the reason why you murdered her. My sister is gone, but I can inherit her property. As for the debt of the Thompson Group..."

Dave did not panic. He took out another agreement. It was the equity transfer agreement of the Thompson Group, and its legal representative was changed from David to Savanna.

The two agreements were placed in front of Savanna, and David had forced Savanna to a dead end.

The Thompson Group was unable to repay the huge debt, and the price Savanna had to pay was to be in jail forever...

This was the father she had loved for her entire life. Savanna felt very bitter to see David's name there Neil rushed over, picked up the agreement, and looked at it several times. Then, Neil shouted at Dave in anger, "You've planned this. How can you bully a woman?" Neil roared and waved his list at Dave.

Chapter 110

Savanna wanted to stop Neil, but she couldn't say anything.

Dave was beaten up by Neil and ran away with his lackeys. Before he ran away, Dave said that he would call the police and make Neil pay the price. Dave even said that he would avenge Betty and make Savanna unable to return to power.

The next day, Dave prosecuted Neil.

Looking at the summons, Neil was furious. He punched the table and cursed, "Dave is just a scum. He always plays the cheap trick."

Neil knew that Dave shouldn't take all the blame for the matter that Savanna was targeted. Dave was just a pawn.

Neil asked Savanna, "What should we do next?"

Savanna's lips were pale, and she looked terrible. Given that, Justin pulled Neil out of the office. Neil scolded Justin, "What are you doing? Aren't you worried?"

Justin felt bitter. "Neil, Ms. Thompson is really upset. Can we not bother her?"

Neil punched the wall. He held back his anger and suggested, "Why don't we turn to Brandon? After all, Ms. Thompson gave birth to a son for him. He won't leave her alone, will he?"

"If you turn to him, you will no longer be my friend."

Hearing that, Neil and Justin turned to see Savanna standing behind them. She looked sad and lonely. Although she was in pain, she was much angrier.

Neil still wanted to say something, but Justin gestured for him to stop.

Savanna said coldly, "If you want to be good to me, don't say anything. Go back first. I will work it out myself."

Savanna looked very confident and seemed to have an idea.

Although Neil and Justin were worried, they could only leave.

Savanna sat in the office for the whole afternoon. She quietly looked out of the window. It grew dark. After a long time, she slowly got up, took her bag, and walked out of the building of the Thompson Group.

The Rose Villas was enveloped in darkness. It was unknown if Giselle was still in the house. The servants had slept. On the aisle, there were a few lights on. Against the soft light, Savanna looked very delicate and lonely.

She pushed open the door of the master bedroom and turned on the light. Mandel was not in the room. Mary might take the child to stay with her since Savanna hadn't returned.

On the bed was a neatly folded quilt.

Everything was neatly placed in the room.

Savanna took a change of clothes and entered the bathroom. She opened the shower and did not move, allowing the water to run down her face and skin.

After taking a shower and drying herself, Savanna walked out of the bathroom. When she reached for the lotion, she accidentally touched something. Savanna looked down at it.

It was a blue bracelet.

Savanna picked up the bracelet and saw some words carved on it.

It read "FOREVER".

Savanna looked at it carefully.

She saw a word next to "FOREVER".

It read "Winnie".

Savanna instantly knew whose item this was.

Savanna opened the drawer and took out a jewelry box.

She closed her eyes and took a deep breath. Her hands trembled, and she finally opened the jewelry box. The bracelet inside was also blue. The words on it read "FOREVER Brandon."

It belonged to Brandon.

The two bracelets showed that they were a couple.

Brandon never allowed Savanna to touch this jewelry box.

Once, when she was cleaning up and accidentally bumped into it, Brandon even threw a tantrum at her.

Winnie's name was like a sore to Savanna. Even if Winnie died, she would still be the greatest obstacle between Savanna and Brandon.

Moreover, Savanna was already in desperate circumstances.

Savanna put the two bracelets back into the box and closed the drawer.

Her hair was wet, and water droplets rolled down from her forehead to her nose. Savanna didn't wipe them off. Instead, she sat on the bed, took out a cigarette, and lit it. Recently, she had a headache and smoked a cigarette to relieve the pressure.

After finishing a cigarette, she took out her phone and sent a message. "Will you be back tonight?"

Savanna thought that Brandon would not reply. They weren't that close. Even when they were a little close, he would rarely reply to her messages. Even if he replied, it would be a few hours later, However, there was an exception to everything. Brandon didn't only reply, but also did it instantly.

"Where are you?" he asked.

"At home." She typed two words.

Brandon sent another message when Savanna thought that he would not reply. "I haven't finished my job yet. You get some sleep."

Just like other husbands and wives, Brandon told Savanna his schedule.

“I can’t sleep.” While Savanna sent the message, she lit another cigarette.

Amid the smoke, she took a few selfies and sent them over.

Brandon was working in his office. In the middle of the night, it was very boring. He looked at Savanna’s delicate face in the photo. Water dripped down from her hair to her nose, chin, and collarbone. The water soaked her pajamas, and her cleavage was revealed. She looked very charming Brandon was turned on.

He felt burning hot.

“I miss you.” Savanna’s message completely overwhelmed Brandon.

Brandon knew that Savanna was lying to him, but he could not hold back his desire. He thought of the scene when they had sex.

His hand trembled. He took the cigarette, lit it, took a drag, and blew the smoke.

However, smoking didn’t make Brandon feel comfortable, and he became thirstier.

Brandon tossed out the cigarette, took his coat, and went straight to the garage without closing the office door. Then he drove his black Cayenne away.

Savanna looked at the message on her phone. It read “I miss you”.

She could still smell nicotine in her mouth.

Given that Brandon hadn’t replied to her message, Savanna laughed at herself. She wanted to withdraw the message but failed.

Savanna thought Brandon wouldn’t have a thing for her no matter how she flirted with him.

Savanna felt that she was simply humiliating herself.

She must be crazy.

Otherwise, she wouldn’t send him messages like that.

The phone slipped on the floor from her hand.

That made a crisp sound, but Savanna sat still and didn't want to pick up the phone.

Hurried footsteps sounded from the outside.

Then the door was slammed. Savanna looked over and saw Brandon's handsome but serious face. Meanwhile, Savanna put on a gloomy face, and her hair was slightly messy.

Perhaps it was because he had never seen Savanna be so charming.

Brandon was surprised, and his eyes were filled with desire.

Savanna did not expect him to come back, and he returned so fast.

She was shocked and wanted to get up, but Brandon quickly closed the door and walked toward her.

"You..."

Just as Savanna opened her mouth, Brandon grabbed her waist and pushed her onto the bed. With the strong tobacco flavor, Brandon kissed her passionately, and Savanna was totally turned on.
