

THE SUBSTITUTE WIFE: MY POOR HUSBAND IS A BILLIONAIRE

CHAPTER 773 CATCH THE PERSON

The following day, Brandon woke Janet up before the sun had even risen.

The driver had been waiting for them at the gate of the villa. When he saw the couple coming out, he opened the door for them respectfully.

Janet watched the passing scenery outside the window with great curiosity. "Honey, where are you taking me? Have you found Jorge already?"

After all, time was of the essence! Elizabeth could only go back to work once Jorge was caught.

Brandon patted the back of her hand and said calmly, "Don't worry about that yet. Let's solve our problems one at a time."

Soon, the car pulled to a stop in front of the Larson Group's building.

Brandon then led her to the company's Security Department.

As soon as she entered the room, Janet was overwhelmed by the amount of screens and technical staff wearing headphones, typing away busily.

Brandon walked up to one of the staff and said, "Show me the IP address you tracked."

The technical staff promptly opened a blank window and input a series of codes into it. Then, a city map appeared on the screen. There was a bright red dot in the center. He kept zooming in until they could see that the red dot marked a specific spot in the city—the Turnery Group's building.

"A few days ago, we traced the IP address to the Turner Group and then the Turner family's villa, and then it disappeared. They must've destroyed the computer to throw us off." The technical staff reported the situation to Brandon and Janet matter-of-factly.

"Are you still trying to track down the hacker?" Janet asked in surprise. She had almost forgotten all about it.

"Of course. Ever since we found out that your computer was hacked, we've been trying to find out who the hacker is," Brandon explained. "Whoever hacked into your computer wanted to scare you. He must've had a plan. Now that we've connected the hacker to the Turner family, I believe that whoever's behind this wants to take advantage of Charis's death to turn her parents against you."

He had found out all of this without her knowing?

Janet was both surprised and deeply touched. It turned out that he still loved her so much.

"I mean, I always knew that someone was trying to mess with me, but I didn't know you were working so hard to pin the person down." Janet looked up at Brandon with newfound respect.

"You're my wife," Brandon said in a gentle voice, his expression softening. "It's only natural that I want to protect you. Besides, I can't wait to teach this hacker a lesson for trying to scare you."

Brandon smiled. He knew that Janet wasn't afraid of ghosts.

But he wouldn't just stand by and watch someone try to harm his wife.

Janet shifted her focus to the red dot on the screen and asked, "So have you figured out who's behind this?"

Brandon murmured cryptically, "I will soon."

Just then, his phone started to ring.

It was Sean calling.

"Boss, we've got her. She's being kept at the interrogation room. We'll wait for you here." Sean was indeed a man of action.

After hanging up, Brandon was planning to go alone, but then Janet grabbed the hem of his suit jacket urgently. "Take me with you. I want to go."

As soon as Brandon turned his head, he met Janet's intent gaze. He didn't say anything and just returned her stare, silently asking Janet to give him a reason.

"That person took advantage of a dead person, I want to know why," Janet said through gritted teeth.

Although she didn't like Charis nor her parents, it was really despicable to take advantage of a dead person.

She wanted to see this matter to the end.
