A Man Like None Other Chapter 2051

A Man Like None Other Novel

A hint of fear rose within Kawasaki. Though Kawasaki could continuously absorb martial energy, Kai also seemed to have endless energy within him. If they were to continue fighting, Kawasaki would lose to Kai even if he could keep absorbing martial energy. Just as Kawasaki tried to devise a new strategy, Kai held onto his sword and leaped.

His sword flashed a green light. He was not going to let Kawasaki have even a chance to breathe. Every time there was a pause in the fight, it would allow Kawasaki to regain more martial energy. I won't let him have the chance to recover!

The green light flashed before Kawasaki. He could not afford to be careless as he swung his katana toward Kai's sword to counter the attack.

The loud sound of an explosion erupted as Kawasaki backed away once again. Kai was getting faster and faster with each swing of his sword.

Kawasaki had no choice but to welcome each of Kai's attacks. The martial energy in him was depleting quickly. Even if he could absorb the heat from the magma to get more, recovering from such a huge decrease in martial energy was hard.

Beads of cold sweat formed on Kawasaki's forehead as he breathed heavily. The katana in his hand was chipped and dented. Although it looked like it was about to break in half, Kawasaki had no choice. He could only rely on the katana to continue the fight..

On the other hand, Kai got more excited as the battle progressed. The spiritual energy within him erupted as the draconic essence on his chest flashed brightly, and Power of Dragons constantly flowed through him.

He put away Dragonslayer Sword when he noticed Kawasaki was at his limit. Kai aimed not to kill Kawasaki but to absorb his power instead. Seeing that Kai had put away Dragonslayer Sword, Kawasaki realized it was his last chance to defeat Kai.

"Shadow Slash!" Kawasaki used up the last of his energy and raised his katana. His eyes glowed red. It looked like he was close to merging with the sword.

The light shot out of the katana and soared toward the sky, out of the volcano's entrance. Even the people outside the volcano could see the terrifying light flying through the clouds.

Kawasaki immediately stepped forward as the light from his katana slashed forward. That last attack would determine the end of the fight.

Right after Kawasaki delivered the last blow, the katana could no longer bear the pressure and instantly broke into several pieces. He stared dumbfoundedly at the katana with only the handle left before throwing it away. It doesn't matter how this ends. After all, it's the last attack! He could only hope that the last blow could either harm or kill Kai.

"Hmph!" However, Kai snickered as he faced Kawasaki's last blow. Boom! He swung his fist and punched a black hole into the void. Kai could not manipulate the space around him at the moment, nor could he rely on his power and rip open the void to go to the place he wanted.

However, it was possible if he wanted to punch the void and create a hole. The light from Kawasaki's sword entered the hole created in the void and immediately vanished.

The hole in the void soon disappeared, but the shockwaves created by Kai's punch had not. The shockwaves slammed into Kawasaki, sending him flying backward before he crashed onto the stone wall and spat out a mouthful of blood.

Kawasaki aged quickly and soon turned into the appearance of an elderly. His face was filled with wrinkles, and his breathing was slow. It looked as though he was about to die.

Kawasaki's eyes no longer had any shine in them. With his hands on the ground, he quickly tried to absorb the heat from the magma into his body.

Kai slowly made his way toward Kawasaki. However, Kawasaki did not move, nor could he move. At that moment, his body was rapidly aging, and the energy within him was dissipating. "Even if I die, I won't let you absorb my power..." Kawasaki said. He could see through Kai's intentions.

Kai sneered. "Do you honestly believe you still have the right to choose?" I have Kawasaki on the chopping block. He's putty in my hands. "I'm just one step away," Kawasaki lamented, his face etched with regret. "You would be no match for me if I attained Martial Arts God."

If I had broken through Martial Arts Saint and attained Martial Arts God, Kai would be no match for me. Though Toyotomi was a Martial Arts God, he had only been a shadow whose powers were greatly reduced. I, on the other hand, am different. If I managed to break through to Martial Arts God, I would be a living Martial Arts God, unparalleled within the martial arts world. There is no higher cultivation level than Martial Arts God within the martial arts world.

“Even if you did, it will end the same way.” With a scathing look, Kai closed the gap between him and Kawasaki one step at a time. Being only martial artists, they would not understand what the heavenly realm looked like.

So what if we attained Martial Arts God? Even if we arrived at the secret or heavenly realms, we would still be as insignificant. Gaping at Kai, Kawasaki was unable to comprehend the source of the latter’s confidence. He knew that under no circumstances would he allow Kai to absorb his power.

Kawasaki let out a sudden roar. The divine soul within him flared as he morphed into a streak of black smog making an attempt to escape. Having attained a cultivation level as high as his, a resurrection was possible as long as his divine soul remained intact.

Kai scoffed at Kawasaki’s attempt to flee. Then, he opened his mouth wide and inhaled sharply, conjuring an immense vortex that drew Kawasaki’s divine soul into his body..

In the end, Kawasaki’s skin was all that remained. Under the scorching heat of the magma, it began to burn and was soon reduced to ashes.

Kawasaki, the best fighter in Jetroina who was on the brink of breaking through to Martial Arts God, dissipated literally in a wisp of smoke. Not a trace of him was left behind.

Outside the volcano crater, the crowd gazed at the peak but none dared to go up. By that point, the peak had been silent for quite some time. Is the battle over? Who won in the end?

All of them were certain it was Kawasaki because he was the best fighter in Jetroina and the pillar of support in the martial arts world there. None of them entertained the possibility that Kawasaki could lose.

“It should be over now. We can bring out Kai Chance’s remains now,” Muto said cautiously, breaking the silence as he gazed at the now tranquil peak.

Just as they prepared to climb up the volcano to do so, a silhouette hovered slowly from its peak suddenly. They watched the figure float to the edge of the crater before descending the volcano on foot. step by step.

Upon getting a closer look at the figure, the crowd became stunned. Their jaws fell open in astonishment. “W-What is going on?” Muto gazed at Kai who was walking down slowly in disbelief. His face went deathly pale. “Where is Mr. Kuroki?”

“This fellow couldn’t have begged Mr. Kuroki for mercy, could he?” The crowd debated in confusion. Only Kazuo seemed to have understood what had happened for his countenance turned awful, as though he had swallowed something unpleasant.

When Kai arrived below, the crowd instinctively parted to let him through. “M-Mr. Chance, where is Mr. Kuroki?” Muto asked Kai, looking him in the eye.

Kai swept a cold glance at Muto, who suddenly felt the weight of a mountain crushing down upon him. Then, he fell to his knees with a thud.

“The best fighter you have is gone. From now on, there can only be one divine being in Jetroina-me.” Though Kai spoke lightly, his words were heard clearly by all the Jetroinians present.

When Kai made his proclamation, he exuded an overwhelming suppression. The aura enveloped the whole of Fujio Mountain. Succumbing to its pressure, every person in the crowd fell involuntarily to their knees.

Though they refused to believe that their deity and pillar of support had fallen, Kai’s presence which exuded the power of an immortal, compelled them to accept the truth.

“All hail, Your Holiness!” Suddenly, a voice called through the crowd. That person was Kazuo, the man who had betrayed Kai by leaking his information to Masato.

Kai has not only destroyed the Four Great Shrines, but he also killed Kawasaki. Who else in Jetroina could challenge him as an equal? In order to survive, Kazuo was forced to butter Kai up.

However, Kazuo’s voice rang out alone. Nobody else’s joined in. Though Kai had slain Kawasaki, it was going to take time for the martial arts world in Jetroina to accept the fact.

Some measures were also necessary to subjugate the martial artists of Jetroina. Realizing that nobody else joined him, Kazuo dropped his head in embarrassment.

Kai merely glanced at Kazuo before turning to Muto. “You Jetroinians can take it up with me anytime if you refuse to submit. I will be here for several more days.”

Without another word, Kai leaped down toward the foot of the mountain. The martial artists of Jetroina sank deep in thought as they gazed at Kai’s silhouette, like a hawk in flight.

When Kai disappeared into the distance, Muto turned his glare upon Kazuo. "You lowly treacherous snake! You have shamed the martial artists of Jetroina. I hereby sentence you to death!"

His rage was palpable. At once, all the martial artists lunged forward. Before Kazuo could utter a word in his defense, the crowd tore him apart so viciously that he was dead beyond doubt.

News of Kawasaki's death by Kai's hand spread quickly like a piece of explosive news throughout Jetroina. Though many martial artists in Jetroina tried their best to suppress the news, it was no use.

Almost overnight, the martial arts world of Jetroina had been likened to street rats, ridiculed and scorned by the rest of the world. Many of the younger martial artists of Jetroina called to restore Jetroinian dignity and avenge Kawasaki.

However, Muto and the other elders stopped them because they knew it was a suicide mission that could not end any other way. They are as insignificant as insects when facing Kai!

Under Kai's leadership, the Watanabe family suddenly became the most powerful family in Jetroina. Ryosuke began commissioning shrines for Kai and statues in his likeness for followers to worship.

Though none within the martial arts world in Jetroina could stand up against Kai, they did not submit. They refused to acknowledge his divinity, much less worship him as a divine being.

As powerful as he was, Kai remained a Chananean. The pride of the Jetroinians kept them from submitting. Shutting himself in a room, Kai spent three days completely refining Kawasaki's divine soul.

As a result, he attained Level Five Martial Arts Saint in a single bound. He would not fear even if he met an actual Martial Arts God, Furthermore, Dragonslayer Sword was now imbued with a sword spirit. Given enough time, the weapon could even hold its own against a Martial Arts Saint.

"Your followers in Jetroina now number in the millions, Master, but those martial artists would not submit to you," Ryosuke reported softly upon noticing that Kai had completed his cultivation. "Pay them no mind. I have a plan."

Without another word, Kai exited the room. Gazing up at the full moon, Kai leaped and attained a height of several hundred meters with a single bound, as if almost arriving atop the moon itself.

Ryosuke's jaw fell open in amazement at the sight. With several leaps, Kai arrived at the center of Xendale, in a luxurious palace.

It was the tallest building in Xendale and the most lavish because it was the home of the spiritual leader and emperor of Jetroina, Yusa Tasuku.

At that moment, he stood before the windows in the great hall, admiring the bright moon. For the past couple of days, the happenings in the martial arts world of Jetroina had been giving him a headache.

Suddenly, Yusa sensed the presence of somebody standing atop the roof of the palace. In disbelief, he took off his glasses and wiped them. Then, he put them on and squinted for a closer look.

However, he couldn't see anybody there. He let out a long sigh. This place is most heavily guarded. Nobody would be standing on the rooftop. I must be seeing things, seeing as I haven't had any rest for the past few days.

Yusa stroked his trademark wispy mustache and prepared to head to bed, intending to call it a day. I have been so overworked the last few days that I'm seeing things. Turning around, he suddenly froze in place, unable to move..

There was a young man sitting on his couch in the living room, sampling his red wine. "Who are you?" Yusa asked fearfully.

Without his permission, no outsiders were allowed in. Furthermore, it was nighttime, and the chances of unauthorized entries was impossible. Yet, this fellow is boldly sitting here! "My name is Kai Chance."

Kai swirled the glass before taking a sip. "This is some decent wine." Yusa shuddered when he heard Kai's name, which he recognized as the person responsible for creating havoc throughout the martial arts world in Jetroina. "W-What are you doing here?"

As he spoke, he edged closer to the side where an alarm was situated. "There's no point in pressing the alarm, as it'll only get your guards killed. I'm only here for a chat, not to harm you. Just relax."

Kai smiled lightly before gesturing at the seat across his. "Please, have a seat." Anyone who saw this would think Kai was the man of the house.

Yusa gazed at Kai, then slowly retracted the hand that was about to press the alarm and sat gingerly across the latter. "What would you like to talk about?" he asked timidly.

“I am aware of your status and power in Jetroina, which is why I want you to issue a decree to get those stubborn martial artists of Jetroina to submit to my divinity. As I’ve killed Kawasaki, who else would you Jetroinians worship if not me?” Kai said coldly.

Yusa frowned at those words. “I won’t participate in the matters of the martial arts world. The martial artists have a right to choose.” Kai’s eyes narrowed. “Are you saying that you won’t issue the decree?”

“That’s right.” Yusa nodded resolutely though he was inwardly quaking with fear. “If you won’t, I wouldn’t hesitate to make personnel changes to the Jetroinian monarchy.”

Having said that, Kai’s aura exploded forth. Then, a live gold dragon materialized behind Kai, twisting and turning in a display of might in the air.

Though Yusa was the emperor, he was a mortal who had never witnessed something of that nature. Gaping at the revolving dragon, he was struck dumb and shaking from head to toe. He was this close to wetting his pants.

Though he had heard that martial artists could materialize their power given enough cultivation, he had never seen it. Upon witnessing Kai’s manifestation, he became utterly stunned.

“If you don’t agree to do it, I’ll kill everyone in the martial arts world in Jetroina and become its emperor.” Kai’s aura flared once more. The dragon, whose bulging eyes resembled a bronze bell, glared fixedly at Yusa.

Widening its maw, the dragon lunged toward him. Instantly, Yusa’s bladder gave way. “Fine! I’ll do as you say.” In response, Kai waved his hand, and the dragon retreated.

“I will write it now and dispatch somebody to announce it tomorrow,” he promised, shivering with fright. “Very well. I hope, that you won’t lie to me for your safety. You know what the consequences are.”

At that, Kai’s aura diminished, and the dragon vanished. Draining the glass of wine, he gazed at the full moon before floating away. As he gazed at Kai’s diminishing silhouette, Yusa fumed at how useless his palace’s guards were and resigned himself to issuing the decree.

There’s no way around it. It’s those martial artists’ fault for being inferior. Even its leader, Kawasaki, had fallen by Kai’s hand. There is nobody in the martial arts world who could go head-to-head with that insolent brat!

Pulling an all-nighter, he finished drafting the decree and sent a crier to announce it when dawn broke. Kai awoke late the following morning, and Ryosuke came in excitedly to greet him.

“Excellent news, Master! The emperor has issued a decree compelling the martial arts world to worship you. Those stubborn martial artists are now forced to do so!” Ryosuke announced, waving the emperor’s decree in his hand. Kai merely glanced at it expressionlessly, as he already knew the outcome from the start.

“Now that matters in Jetroina have been cleared up, Ryosuke, I believe nobody will be touching the Watanabe family in a hurry. I should be getting back.”

Ryosuke’s spirits fell at those words, and his eyes filled with reluctance. “I will oversee matters here in Jetroina in your stead, Master. Also, I will have people send over the resources periodically. However...”

Ryosuke hesitated, seemingly embarrassed to speak. “Just speak your mind,” Kai said. “Yuri has been studying in Chanaea, Master. I am hoping that she could return with you to complete her education,” Ryosuke said. “If she pleases you, she can remain by your side to serve you.”

“As Yuri is still young, she should complete her education. We can discuss her time with me in the future.” Kai did not dare take Yuri as a servant. If the women at home heard about this, I’ll have hell to pay.

Upon locating Flaxseed, Kai picked up Yuri and prepared to return home. “Come back with us, Fandor. What’s the point of remaining here alone?” Flaxseed implored Fandor.

“I don’t think I’ll come as I’m doing well here.. Besides, I no longer have to pretend to be wise. Even with my abysmal abilities, the martial artists here will worship me anyway,” Fandor said, chuckling. “As it is my friend they are now worshipping, I’m going to have the time of my life here at Jetroina.”

“Thank you for your help here over the past few days, Fandor.” Kai felt indebted. If not for Fandor having Ryosuke produce the snow lotus of Fujio Mountain, Kai could not have broke through. to Martial Arts Saint.

Furthermore, the chain of events following that would not have happened, and Kai would not have exerted his power over Jetroina that quickly.

Fandor gave a faint smile. “There’s no need to thank me. Given that you are now the divine being of Jetroina, my status has risen alongside yours.”

Soon, Kai and his companions boarded the plane back home. He gazed at his clenched fist. This time, I will eradicate the Evil Heart Sect once I got back.
