

Chapter 34 Asking Liam For Help

Liam could only sigh helplessly.

He had imagined countless times that Yolanda would realize her mistakes and apologize to him one day.

That was why he kept answering his phone every time she called.

But much to his dismay, she either insulted or accused him each time she called.

Yolanda kept shouting on the other end of the line. "If you are not a useless loser, how can I be so humiliated by my family? How can I become a joke in the whole city? You know what, Liam? Isabella asked me to be the family cook today.

The CEO of Kingland Group is her fan. If they get married in the future, what will they do to me, and what will I become? A complete joke?"

Liam could tell that Yolanda was venting her anger, so he could only say helplessly, "You have Dennis."

Yolanda immediately shouted, "Can he compare to the CEO of Kingland Group? Mr. Hoffman is every woman's dream lover in Ninverton. Dennis can't even hold a candle to him."

Liam was stunned upon hearing this.

He had heard these words before. It was just that back then, it was the other way around.

For some reason, he was delighted when he heard this from Yolanda.

But while listening to the intermittent crying on the phone, he felt a little sorry for her.

Liam sighed helplessly. In the past three years, Yolanda had indeed suffered a lot of ridicule and grievances. It was not all her fault that she became like this.

So he tried to comfort her, "Isabella hasn't gotten the project yet, right? How about this? You come to Kingland Group tomorrow, and I'll help you meet Mr. Hoffman."

Actually, if he was to make the Lambert family a partner in his project, Yolanda was his best option.

They were together for three years, so he was very clear about her working ability.

When Yolanda heard this, she stopped crying and said, "You are just a driver. How can you help me meet Mr. Hoffman?"

It seemed that all the members of the Lambert family really thought of him as a driver. But he didn't intend to explain.

He just played along with Yolanda's words. "Even though

"I'm just a driver, I can meet Julie every day. She's the vice president, and I can ask her to do me a small favor."

Yolanda had already calmed just now. But when she heard Liam's last sentence, she felt sad again.

She knew that Liam was not Julie's driver. He was her lover.

She was about to lose her temper and say she didn't need his help. But Isabella's complacent face unconsciously appeared in her mind.

So instead of refusing, she pouted and said, "Fine."

Then she hung up the phone directly.

The busy tone on the phone made Liam speechless again. She was still as arrogant as ever. She didn't even thank him. It seemed that he couldn't treat her too nicely.

He put down his phone and looked outside the window in a daze.

Liam was confused. Why would he want to help Yolanda? Was it simply for business?

Or because he still had feelings for her?

The next day, Yolanda received a phone call from Liam at two in the afternoon. She rushed to Kingland Group without hesitation.

She sat alone in the reception room, waiting. Her palms sweated so profusely that the project business proposal she was holding was almost wet.

After a long time, the door was pushed open from the outside.

Yolanda immediately stood up and said, "Mr. Hoffman, I'm Yolanda Lambert from Lambert Real Estate Company..."

But before she could finish her words, she was stunned.

Instead of Mr. Hoffman, a woman came in.

It was Vivian, walking in with a contract in her hand.

She said respectfully, "Miss Lambert, this is a contract worth two hundred million dollars. After careful consideration, Mr. Hoffman has decided to make you his partner in this project."
