

Chapter 114

In the next few days, everything was peaceful and smooth.

With the instructors from the military factory supervising the site, the assembly of the large machinery was completed smoothly, and the operators had gotten used to operating the machines.

All they needed was the safety inspection from the General Administration of Quality Supervision and the stamp of approval, then they could start the project.

Everything was progressing accordingly.

On this particular day, Luna was charting out the next phase of the company's project in her office.

Danni, her secretary, rushed into the office and said, "Ms. Crestfall, the people from the GAQS are here. Director Densel Powell is leading the team himself. They are already at the site."

Luna immediately put her work aside and said, "Let's go have a look."

At the construction site, a bloated middle-aged man was pointing at the machines.

The employees of New Moon Corporation followed him around timidly and dared not raise their voices in reply to his questions.

Luna noticed what was going on, so she went over with furrowed brows and asked, "Director Powell, the machines..."

"These are problematic machines! There are potential safety hazards that cannot be used in construction." Densel then looked at Luna and said, "According to the GAQS rules, machines that don't fit the safety production criteria are to be...destroyed. Ms. Crestfall, will you be doing it yourself or we shall do you the honor?"

He then looked at Luna with a grin.

Luna was stunned.

Potential safety hazards? Problematic? Must be destroyed?

Ridiculous! Impossible!

"Director Powell, are you sure about this?" Luna asked in disbelief. "These machines are all from the military factory. How could they produce machines with serious safety hazards? Is something wrong with the inspection..."

Densel did not want to listen to her explanation.

As matter of fact, when he took the card from Solomon, the fate of the machines was sealed. They must be destroyed.

(C

Like a famous philosopher once said, once you suspect someone, the trust in him or her is already gone.

Densel said in disdain, "Ms. Crestfall, you are a reputable person, so how can you say something that outrageous? Military orders are made with strict requests, and they must go through legal procedures and military inspection. Why would they produce machines for commercial use?"

He looked at the woman in front of him with disdain.

People said that blondes were idiots. Luna was beautiful and seductive, but she was stupid.

Luna was furious. She wanted to show Densel the order invoice she got from Andrius the other day, but Densel stopped her.

"Even if they are produced under military inspection, as long as the quality fails to meet requirements, they must be destroyed."

Whether the machines were qualified or not was a matter of his word, so he was emboldened by the sheer power.

Densel left, leaving Luna stunned on the spot.

She was furious and anxious, but she had no words to argue back.

It was then that Solomon called her. "Luna Crestfall, aren't you starting the Valiant Institute project anytime soon? If you keep delaying it and the deadline isn't met, when Mayor Freely and the Wolf King put the blame on you, then New Moon Corporation will be finished."

Solomon's timely phone call infuriated Luna. She gritted her teeth and realized that Solomon was behind this as well. He must have gotten the General Administration of Quality Supervision to disrupt the progress.

However, without sufficient evidence, she could not do anything. The only way to solve this was to ask for Mayor Freely's help.

Unfortunately, Mayor Freely was having a meeting in another city and could not make it back anytime soon.