

Andrius had no idea that his 'image' was heavily distorted by a delusional girl in less than an hour.
He was helping Rainbow settle down in her dorm.

Despite the few pieces of luggage Rainbow brought with her, she unpacked into an entire house. The bags she brought could hold more things than his military backpack.

In addition to the somewhat isolated dorm, he helped with cleaning and laying out her things.

He almost cleaned the entire place just for Rainbow. When he was done with everything, it was already evening.

It had been a full day since he left Dream's Waterfront at 7 a.m.

How did he spend his day like this?

Back when he was at war, he could lead the charge to the enemy's base in just a morning.

In other words, it was more terrifying and exhausting to be with a woman than to kill enemies on the battlefield.

"Andrius, do you need some rest?"

Rainbow barely did anything, thus she felt embarrassed. She pointed at the boba tea on the table. "The boba tea I got you is getting warm. Why don't you drink it first?"

Andrius had no time to drink tea. He continued cleaning and working around the dorm and finally settled everything before the moon rose.

Rainbow suggested, "Um... since you helped me with everything, I'll buy you dinner! Let's go get something good!"

Before Andrius could say yes, he got a phone call.

He pulled his phone out and saw Dr. Artemis' name.

Andrius went to the side to answer the phone.

"Young man, are you free? Do you want to have dinner?" Dr. Artemis said with a laugh.

Andrius glanced at Rainbow and decided to go to dinner with Dr. Artemis instead. "Of course."

Rainbow was a young adult who loved sweets and boba tea which did not match Andrius' taste buds.

“Alright. It’s settled then.” Dr. Artemis was happy that Andrius answered his invitation. “I’ll tell Lyra to pick you up. Where are you now?”

“I’m around the university area.”

On second thought, he decided to give a more precise location, “Tell her to wait for me at the traffic light in front of Sumeria University’s main gate.”

“Not a problem.”

The call ended.

Rainbow went up to him and asked, “Andrius, are you having dinner with me?”

“Uh...” Andrius quickly came up with an excuse and said, “You can treat me to dinner when you know how to earn money. I’ll pass this time. I still have something to do, so I have to go now.”

Then, before Rainbow could say a word, he left towards the main campus gate.

Rainbow had a feeling Andrius was hiding something, and things were not as simple as they looked.

After Andrius left her dorm room, she came out, locked the door, and decided to trail him secretly. She wanted to know who Andrius was meeting.

Little did she know, Andrius already knew that she was following him the moment she came out. Rainbow was not a good spy given her poor stealth technique. He was unfazed and did not bother to explain either. He simply ignored the girl and waited for Lyra by the traffic light.

A while later, a pink Mini Cooper stopped next to Andrius.

The window wound down, and it was Lyra.

“Mr. Doctor, come in!”

Andrius got into the passenger’s seat.

Rainbow saw him getting into the pink Mini Cooper. She was confused why her brother-in-law would get into some other woman’s car.

She did not remember her cousin, Luna, driving a pink Mini Cooper, and there was no way a man would drive a pink car, or at least, not in her assumption.

Who could the woman be?

Rainbow's head was filled with multiple questions.

Lyra drove back to Artemis' Clinic, parked her car, and went down; Andrius followed her.

Suddenly, an old street lamp, due to poor maintenance over the years, fell down, crashing toward Lyra's head.