Chapter 712

Vroom...

A series of roars echoed.

The convoy drove toward the location of the Lycantroops' camp.

Upon arrival, they staged a perfect hunting scene, then left quietly.

The night was silent. It was as if nothing happened.

The moon in the sky had already been covered by dark clouds, and the earth was plunged into endless darkness.

Crackle!

Suddenly, a bolt of lightning flashed, illuminating the vast land as bright as day for only an instant.

Then, darker shadows followed, as if chaos was still unfolding.

Whoosh...

Rumble...

Crackle...

Flashes of lightning flickered. The boundless sky seemed to tear apart, emitting roars.

pearls falling from a broken

Torrential rain arrived out of nowhere. It started in the blink of an eye, like pearls string.

Water quickly formed puddles of varying sizes on the vast land and eventually sea.

verged into the vast

The blood of the politicians swept across the mountains and fields under the wash of the torrential rain. The strong smell of blood spread continuously.

In the end, it pervaded the earth and the air.

Exposed bodies littered the wilderness, and blood flowed like a river.

Together, they painted a scene of tragedy.

The next day, Andrius was still sleeping in the morning.

“Mm?”

Suddenly, he jolted upright in bed. His eyes were still closed when he threw a punch at the approaching shadow.

“Andy! Stop, it’s me!” Noir hurriedly shouted.

Whoosh....

The fist came to a half about half an inch away from Noir’s forehead, but the cold wind from the fist caused his hair to slick back.

“Noir?” Andrius opened his eyes and looked at Noir in front of him. He frowned and asked, “Why are you here so early in the morning, and in such a hurry? Did something happen?”

“Something major has happened!”

Noir's expression was unusually serious.

He took a deep breath and said in a low voice, "Last night, 36 politicians that the Western Nations sent to inspect Florence were found dead outside the Lycantroops' camp

"At the same time, the near-ground satellites under the Lycantroops' jurisdiction were also hacked and completely disabled for half an hour."

Noir took out his phone as he spoke and opened the news app. The news articles were all about the events of last night.

"What a crude attempt to shift the blame..." Andrius frowned and said, "Any discerning person can see at a glance that this is an attempt to frame the Lycantroops."

Noir smiled wryly. "But we have no evidence to clear our name."

Andrius fell silent.

"The Western Nations are furious. At six in the morning, they deployed five million troops at Griffin Pass, less than a hundred kilometers from the Lycantroops' encampment.

"The heads of the Western Nations all issued severe condemnations and warned Florence that if a reasonable explanation isn't provided within three hours, they will launch a full-scale war in retaliation."

Noir's voice was very dry.

Andrius' expression instantly turned dark.

Ring, ring...

Just then, Noir's phone rang. He immediately put it on speakerphone.

“Sir, we just received news that the emperor, along with the six War Gods and the four Warzone Masters, arrived at Sumeria airport half an hour ago.

“They’re currently heading toward the garage.”
