

Chapter 698

Smack! Alistair was instantly furious and slapped the guards' faces without hesitation. That mercilessness proved that he was indeed the real warden! The guards knew his behavior and character very well. The captain of the guards immediately reported, "Sir, we just saw someone who looked exactly like you entering the office confidently, so we tried to stop you..." "What did you say?" A stern look flashed on Alistair's face at those words. He grabbed the collar of the guard captain and glared at him with wide eyes. "I – it's true....." The guard captain stammered, "That person looked exactly like you..." "Then, what are you all still standing here for?!" Alistair realized something was off. His eyes gleamed fiercely as he commanded, "Leave a few guards here and secure the place. "You! Bring some men with me to the office." He immediately led a group of guards to the office. The place was empty. Not even a single strand of hair could be seen, let alone a living person. However, Alistair did not let his guard down. He thoroughly examined the place but found that none of his belongings had been touched. Even the spout of the teapot he deliberately pointed in a certain direction was still exactly the same as before. Then, he turned on his computer and checked it. He paid particular attention to the encrypted folder containing the prison layout and confirmed that it had not been accessed recently. There was no trace at all. The latest access time was when he had last used it. Afterward, he reviewed the surveillance footage during this time period. It was empty. No one had appeared at all. From the prison gate, every monitor and intersection showed no signs of suspicious personnel. "This is....." The guard captain was at a loss for words. "Damn it!" Alistair had been on edge for a long time. When he realized that it was just a misunderstanding, he was infuriated and kicked the guard captain without hesitation. Chapter 698 2/2 "Make sure you look closely in the future! If you ever give a false report again, I'll crush your balls on the spot!" After saying that, Alistair grabbed the documents and left the warden's office with a huff. "Strange..." The guard captain was also dumbfounded. He covered his face and rubbed his leg, watching in confusion as he left the warden's office. However, he forgot to close the door. Swoosh! Half a minute later, Alistair returned with the guard captain again and searched everywhere. It was a wild goose chase. Unfortunately, they still did not find any clues.

"Dammit!" Alistair cursed in anger and left in frustration. The guard captain left too. This time, they left for real. A minute later, Andrius rose from the couch and sat at the computer. Earlier, when the group of people entered, he used a specially-made hallucinogen and exposed Alistair and all the guards to it. Everything they saw in the office and on the surveillance footage was nothing but an illusion. Furthermore, when Alistair was checking the computer, Andrius discovered the password for the hidden encrypted folder. He double-clicked it to open it and found the prison map as expected. He could see how it was arranged, where the crucial areas were, and the types of prisoners detained there clearly. The most conspicuous location, marked with five red stars, was where the former leader of the Hawkeye Group, the Black Hawk, was being held.