Chapter 1231

A little over half an hour later, they were back at Lakeview Estates The place had been empty for a few days and was a bit dusty Zack and Patricia helped Cornelia clean up the place.

Tahlia's room was spotless, not a trace of her left. She didn't seem to plan on coming back. Cornelia hid her pain and told Patricia, "You can have this room from now on."

"Sure"

After sorting out Patricia's accommodation, Zack tried to talk to Cornelia but hesitated

Cornelia, not in the mood for a deep conversation, said, "It's late, and we have work tomorrow. You should head home and get some sleep."

"What? Sleep? How can I sleep without knowing what's going on?" Zack pulled Cornelia to sit on the living room couch, "Tell me straight, why did you suddenly get a divorce?"

Cornelia shrugged nonchalantly, "Didn't feel like being married anymore, so I got a divorce"

Zack said angrily in a raised voice, "Cornelia, I get that you want to put on a brave face for others, but do you need to do that with me? Haven't I seen you at your worst?"

"That's the truth Why are you so mad?" Cornelia retorted

Zack was about to explode. "You protected Marcus like crazy before. Even a bad word about him would set you off. You told us countless times that you wanted to be with him forever Now, all of a sudden, you guys are divorced. Do you expect me to believe nothing happened?"

"Let the past be the past. There's nothing to talk about." Cornelia didn't want to bring up Marcus again.

Zack was so mad he wanted to strangle her, "Cornelia, are you trying to kill me with frustration?"

Cornelia didn't respond.

Zack warned. "Don't think by staying silent I'll stop asking. You need to tell me what happened, or no one's getting any sleep tonight."

Cornelia still didn't respond

"Cornelia!" Zack was fuming.

"What do you want me to say?" Cornelia looked at Zack, her eyes clear and beautiful. "Say he fell for another woman? That he brought her home for the night? That he was nice to her in front of me, but ignored me..."

Her eyes welled up with tears as she spoke, but she held them back.

Zack was furious, his anger reaching its peak, "Marcus fell for another woman? Who is she?"

Before Cornelia could answer, a face flashed through his mind, "Is it Tahlia?"

"Does it matter? Does knowing who she is matter?"

Zack retorted, "Doesn't it? Maybe it really doesn't! I can't believe Marcus could do something like this. I thought he was different, trustworthy, that he would always treat you right...

Zack held Cornelia tightly, gently patting her back, "Cornelia, cry it out. Let all the pain flow out with your tears. After tonight, don't shed another tear for this undeserving man."

Cornelia forced a smile, holding back her tears, "I won't cry for a man who doesn't deserve it."

“Crying doesn’t make you weak.” Zack looked at Cornelia’s brave face, his heart aching

He used to think that Cornelia had finally found a good man, that someone would take care of her, and he could safely leave her to Marcus. Who would’ve thought it would end up in divorce?

“All I did was see a man’s true colors and got a divorce. Nothing to cry about,” Cornelia said stubbornly.

“You’re always so strong. Zack sighed.

“Do I have a choice?” Cornelia gave a bitter smile.

Zack pondered for a moment. She had lost her parents at a young age and was often referred to as an omen. She might not have been able to survive if she hadn’t persevered.

“Why don’t you head home and get some rest,” Cornelia shooed him off.

Zack, concerned for Cornelia, didn’t want her to be alone. He’d like to stick around for a bit, if that’s okay with you.”

“Alright”

They both leaned back against the couch, half-reclined, staring up at the ceiling.

After a moment of silence, Zack started, “Cornelia...”

“Hmm?”

“We haven’t done anything terrible over the years, right?” Zack’s voice was barely a whisper.

“Of course not,” Cornelia replied

“Then why have we had to deal with so much crap? Abby got mixed up with a bad dude, you did too. And me, I’ve been looking for a girlfriend but I’m still flying solo”

Cornelia chuckled, “Maybe we’re just magnets for shady characters.”

“And me? Am I single because there’s something wrong with me?” Zack joked, trying to lighten the mood.

Cornelia laughed. “There’s nothing wrong with you. Plenty of girls are into you, you just haven’t found the one you’re into,

Zack said, “Because I’ve got you and Abby, I want every guy you come across to treat you well, so I should treat every girl I meet well ”

Hearing this, Cornelia felt a warm fuzziness inside, “Zack, having you and Abby in my life is the best thing that’s ever happened to

Zack said, “Me too...”

1. me.

Cornelia draped her arm over Zack’s shoulder. “Thanks for sticking around, but I’m really okay. I’m tired, need to hit the sack. You should too!”

Zack glanced at the time, it was past 3 in the morning. “Alright, I’ll head off. Remember, I’m here if you need anything.”

“I know,” Cornelia said with a smile. She always knew that no matter what, she still had them.

After Zack left, Cornelia went back to her room, crawled into bed, but sleep eluded her. Her mind was like a movie projector, playing back all her memories with Marcus.

She remembered when she first started working with Marcus, she was sexually harassed Marcus didn’t hesitate to stand up for her. He taught her to say no to sexual harassment.

Marcus gave her a strong sense of security. Maybe that was when he started to hold a special place in her heart.

Later, they went on a trip to the highlands for work, where she was injured trying to save him. Even though it left an ugly scar on her arm, she had no regrets. Because she felt a boss as excellent as him was worth it..

Then, they went to France for work. When she was kidnapped by Zavier, Marcus showed up like a hero and rescued her. At that time, she knew he was married, but she didn't harbor any inappropriate feelings for him. She never had any ulterior motives, but she certainly remembered his kindness.

Later, when she found out that he was her husband Jeremy, the one who disappeared right after they got married, she struggled, but she quickly accepted the truth.

Cornelia had to admit, without her even realizing it, this man named Marcus had quietly stepped into her life..

Chapter 1233

Old times stuck to you like shadows, but the person ain't the same no more. Marcus had changed, and maybe Cornelia had too.

They can't go back to how things were, and if they ever met again, they'd just be strangers Cornelia hoped she never had to see him again. But, did being out of sight really mean out of mind?

Even though Cornelia didn't want to admit it, the pain in her heart reminded her that she still cared In fact, she cared a lot. That was why she insisted on getting a divorce Sometimes, Comelia even admired herself. Despite the pain being so intense that it was hard to breathe, she still managed to put on a brave fa ce in front of others. Maybe, this strength was something Marcus had given her. She'd spent so much time working by his side, she knew better than anyone how well he handled stress. She'd seen a lot and she'd learned a lot

Why was she thinking about Marcus again? Cornelia shook her head, trying to get Marcus out of her mind. But he was like a virus, slowly invading her heart.

Pain was all she can feel right now. Cornelia instinctively curled up, as if that could lessen the pain.

The night was awfully long, so long that Cornelia didn't know how she made it through. All she knew was that she'd managed to survive another endless night. But Cornelia got up and got ready like she always did. She even put on makeup to hide the tiredness on her face.

Once she was ready, she opened her bedroom door and was greeted by the smell of breakfast.

Cornelia headed towards the kitchen "Patricia...

Upon hearing Cornelia's voice, Patricia popped her head out of the kitchen, "Nelly, I got coffee and cheese sandwiches for breakfast, do you like it?"

Cornelia nodded, "I love it, absolutely love it."

"Then enjoy it today. I also made two plates of pancakes in your way. Let's dig in." Patricia heard that eating high-calorie food and sweets can lift up one's mood, so she prepared these for Cornelia.

Cornelia hugged Patricia from behind, "Patricia, you know me so well. What am I gonna do? You're so good to me, I don't think I can ever let you go."

Patricia laughed and said, "I'd be happy if you can't let me go. I'm healthy now and I plan to take care of you for many more years

"Thank you!"

Just then, the doorbell rang

“Patricia, I’ll get the door” Cornelia thought it was Zack or Abigail, she didn’t check the peephole before opening the door. Only then did she realize it was a delivery guy

The delivery guy, dragging two full carts of boxes, greeted Cornelia with a big smile.

“Are you Miss Cornelia?”

Cornelia nodded.

“I’ve told him. I don’t want his stuff,” Cornelia said

The worker chuckled awkwardly. “This ain’t his stuff If you don’t believe me, you can open the boxes and see for yourself”

With a skeptical glance, Cornelia opened one of the boxes. The clothes inside looked like what Patricia usually wore, the boxes probably packed with all of Patricia’s belongings from Celestia I Chateau It seemed like Marcus had gotten everything packed up and sent over early, he probably didn’t plan on letting Patricia return.

Not only was Marcus eager to kick Cornelia out, but he was also getting rid of Patricia who took care of him. Maybe he didn’t want his new lover to find any trace of Cornelia, his ex-wife, in the mansion

Cornelia moved aside. “Just put everything in the living room”

The two workers quickly moved the large boxes into the living room.

Patricia, busy in the kitchen, hadn't seen the boxes yet. "Nelly, did you buy something?" she asked.

"No, it's Marcus. He had your stuff sent over," Cornelia replied.

"I see " Patricia was silent for a moment before responding indifferently. She had thought as long as her things were still at Celestial Chateau, there was still a chance for Cornelia to go back, a chance to salvage their marriage. Seemed like she was being too optimistic..

Marcus

wasn't acting on impulse. He really didn't need Patricia anymore, the woman who had looked after him for over twenty years like her own son.

Cornelia quickly walked into the kitchen, "Patricia, let me help you with the noodles."

Patricia had considered the Hartley family her own for many years. Now that she was suddenly kicked out, she must be feeling pretty down. Cornelia understood that, so she tried to distract Patricia

"Nelly, the Marcus I know wouldn't do this," Patricia said with a smile.

Cornelia paused, "Patricia, let's not talk about him."

"Alright, let's not mention him anymore"

Working together, they quickly prepared pancakes. Each of them had a stack of pancakes, a cup of coffee, and a sandwich.

After the meal, they were both full. Cornelia let out a satisfied burp, which made Patricia laugh. But all of a sudden, Patricia burst into tears. "Nelly, you're so good to me, yet Marcus chose to be with another woman. He really doesn't know how lucky he was to have you."

"Patricia, that's life. People come and go. Marcus and I were just not meant to be. Let's just let it go and move on."

Cornelia quickly handed Patricia a tissue.

"Nelly..."

“Patricia, I know you’re still attached to the Hartleys, and to Marcus. But I also know you’re too proud to go back to him. So until you decide what to do, you can stay here as long as you want”

Cornelia’s words comforted Patricia. She wiped her tears away and said, “Nelly, thank you.”

“You don’t have to be so formal with me, Patricia.” Cornelia took out her phone, transferred $300 to Patricia, ‘I’ve sent you some money for living expenses. Check your account.”

“Nelly, I have enough money to buy groceries. You don’t have to do this.”

“If you don’t accept it, how can I be at ease letting you help me with the cooking?”

and

In reality, Cornelia needed to pay Patricia a salary. But considering Patricia’s character, she might not accept it. So Cornelia planned to give her some extra money when she went back home. She definitely didn’t want Patricia to suffer any loss.

The next second, Patricia said, ‘Granny Luisa gave me a bank card. It has quite a bit of money in it for our living expenses and my salary”

Cornelia was taken aback, “Granny Luisa knows about the divorce?”

Patricia nodded, “Marc told her. She was furious and had to be sent to the hospital. But she still remembered to call me and ask me to take good care of you”

Chapter 1235

Granny Luisa was hospitalized because she was upset? Cornelia asked anxiously, "Do you know which hospital she's in? I'm going to see her right now.*

Before Patricia could answer, the doorbell rang again. Cornelia turned her head to see in the video of the doorbell a gray haired Granny Luisa and a middle-aged woman standing in the doorway, it was Granny Luisa and her assistant.

Cornelia rushed to open the door, and as soon as she did, Granny Luisa hugged her tightly, "Nelly, I'm so sorry! I owe you and Granny Rebecca an apology"

"Granny Luisa, you've done nothing wrong. Please don't blame yourself," Cornelia hugged Granny Luisa back, then stepped back.

"I heard you were hospitalized? How come you're here at my place?"

"Nelly Granny Luisa couldn't finish, tears rolling down her face.

Granny Luisa was born into a wealthy family and traveled with her family for business since she was a child. She was a typical powerful woman in her youth, having weathered many storms. In all the time Comelia had known Granny Luisa, apart from when Granny Rebecca died, this was the first time she had seen her cry.

Comelia felt a pang in her heart, "Granny Luisa..."

Granny Luisa wiped her tears and said. "It's all Marcus' fault. You can't be left with nothing after the divorce. You have to get what you deserve."

"I don't want it," Cornelia shook her head. She didn't want any further entanglements with Marcus. If she was going to cut ties, she was going to do it completely.

"Sweetie, you can't let your pride blind you to the importance of money. For a woman, having money is what matters most. You don't have to take Marcus' stuff, but you have to take what I give you," Granny Luisa said.

Cornelia understood this. Money was crucial. If she accepted Granny Luisa's gifts, she wouldn't have to worry about her life. But she had her own beliefs, and she believed in her capabilities, "..."

Granny Luisa didn't give Cornelia a chance to refuse, "I've already given you everything I intended to, I won't take them back and you can't transfer them. Th ey're yours. Now, I'm giving you some more money, so you don't have to work so hard, don't have to wake up early and go to bed late drawing comics

H

Cornelia said, "I don't find it tiring. Drawing comics is my hobby and I can make money from it. I'm already better off than many people.

"Then consider drawing comics as your hobby from now on. Regardless of what Cornelia said, Granny Luisa insisted on opening a bank account in Cornelia's name and depositing a huge sum of money into it.

How much was it? So much that Cornelia felt her hand heat up just by looking at the number.

A total of 220 million dollars.

Even though it was only a small part of the wealth of the world's richest family, the Hartley family, it was an astronomical figure that Cornelia would never be able to earn in her lifetime.

"Nelly, take this. It will put my mind at ease," Granny Luisa said.

In this marriage, Cornelia hadn't contributed anything. Having so much money made her feel uneasy, but Granny Luisa's firm attitude didn't give Cornelia a chance to refuse. The only thing Cornelia could do was passively accept it, "Thank you, Granny Luisa."

"Cough, cough..." Seeing Cornelia finally accepting the gifts, Granny Luisa's tension was finally relieved, and she started to cough violently.

Cornelia quickly held her, "Granny Luisa, let me take you back to the hospital."

Granny Luisa waved her hand,

"I'm just short of breath because I'm nervous. I just need to rest a bit. Today is the day of Granny Rebecca's case verdict, and I want to be there with you"

Young people might feel uncomfortable due to temporary tension, but for someone of Granny Luisa's age, it might take a long time to recover from a bout of tension.

Cornelia was still a bit worried, "Granny Luisa, I've taken your money, now you must listen to me. You should go back and rest now, I think my friends will accompany me to handle the case. You don't need to worry about me."

Granny Luisa thought for a moment. Her current physical condition was indeed not suitable for too much tension.

"Alright, let them go with you. My legal team will also be there. If there's any problem, I'll help you deal with it. You don't need to be afraid"

Granny Luisa was very concerned about Cornelia's life; she considered everything for Cornelia very thoughtfully

Chapter 1236

Chapter 1236

Comelia's eyes welled up with tears, "Thank you, Granny Luisa."

Gently patting Cornelia's head, Granny Luisa said, "Silly girl, didn't we agree long ago that whatever happens between you and Marc wouldn't affect our relationship?"

"Yeah" Cornelia nodded

Granny Luisa then turned to Patricia, "Marc isn't worth a damn, it's fine if Nelly broke up with him. From now on, you take good care of Nelly here"

Patricia nodded, "Don't worry. I'll do my best to look after Nelly"

Only then did Granny Luisa feel relieved, "Hmm Nelly, I guess I'll be off then."

"Til walk you out," Comelia offered.

"No need, dear, I have people with me, and my personal doctor and nurse are waiting for me downstairs. You should go back to your things."

Cornelia said, "Take care, Granny. After Granny Rebecca's verdict. I'll come visit you"

"Alright."

After bidding goodbye to Granny Luisa, Cornelia went back to her room to pack up.

She planned to change into a more formal outfit for court. While changing, she found a delicate jewelry box in her drawer. Inside the box was a necklace, a gift from Marcus called Heavenly Radiance, worth thirty million dollars.

Upon seeing the necklace, she was reminded of the first time she wore it. That day, she sat in the car, and Marcus held the necklace, and kept staring at it. His gaze was so intense that it seemed like he wanted to swallow her whole. Suddenly, he made a move, slipping it around her neck, leaving a huge red hickey...

Cornelia sneered, taking the jewelry box and putting it in her bag, planning to return the necklace to Marcus later.

Anything he gifted her, she wouldn't keep. Thankfully, Marcus didn't give her many things, so she didn't need to take special time to deal with them.

After packing, Zack drove Cornelia and Abigail to court. Abigail held Cornelia's hand tightly, wanting to say something several times but couldn't. They had grown up together and knew each other very well.

She knew Cornelia was tough. She might look fine, but inside she could be hurting a lot. Luckily, Cornelia was quick to move on and would never waste time on a man not worth it. She just didn't expect them to run into Marcus. Their car and Marcus' luxury car entered the parking lot one after the other

"Damn it!" Zack honked the horn.

"Nelly. Abigail watched Cornelia's expression

Cornelia's face was cold, "Zack, let's park on the left."

She wanted to avoid Marcus, but he insisted on getting close. Marcus' luxury car was originally heading to the right side of the parking lot. Maybe there were no parking spaces on that side. Anyway, they turned to the left and even parked next to their car.

Zack glanced back at Cornelia in the back seat. "What's he up to? Kicks you out in the middle of the night, then regrets it the next day?"

"Don't overthink it, maybe there's just no parking spots over there Zack, drive a bit further, let's park somewhere else Cornelia didn't want to jump to conclusions. Zack was already on the same page, he floored it and the car shot out of the parking space. He took another turn before finally parking next to the elevator

No sooner had they parked, Marcus' car followed. This time, Marcus' driver blocked their car, making it impossible for them to move.

Zack was pissed and wanted to curse out loud, but Cornelia stopped him, "Ignore them, the trial is about to start, let's go

Cornelia got out of the car, Marcus did the same and they both headed for the elevator.

Zack and Abigail followed Cornelia, but were blocked by Jayden, President Hartley has a few words for Cornelia, you guys wouldn't mind taking the next elevator, right?"

Zack yelled. "Who the hell are you? And who the hell is President Hartley? What does he think Nelly is, some sort of pet that comes when called?"

Abigail pulled him back, "Zack, calm down! If Marcus has something to say to Nelly, let him say it. Better have him get it all out now, so he won't bother Nelly later."

Jayden added, "Right, the girl's got a point. This should be the last time President Hartley sees Cornelia. There won't be another chance."

Abigail sarcastically quipped,
"Really? Is President Hartley getting remarried so soon?"

"President Hartley is deeply in love with Cornelia, there's no way he'd marry another woman"

"Deeply in love? He's worthy? Don't Insult the phrase" Zack scoffed.

Jayden didn't like his president being bad-mouthed, but it was hard to explain, "Whatever, what's the point of arguing with you clueless idiots."

They would never understand how heartbroken President Hartley was when he saw Cornelia leave with the divorce papers last night, he almost lost it.

Even though he'd seen all sorts of situations with Marcus, Jayden still shuddered thinking about last night. In that moment, he wanted nothing more than to bring Cornelia back to Marcus and tell her the truth, but he couldn't. He could only watch Marcus suffer unbearable pain. Jayden didn't dare to think further.

Zack snapped, "Who are you calling an idiot?"

Abigail held him back again, "Zack, don't lose your temper."

"I'm not losing my temper, I just can't stand their shamelessness. Marcus has wronged Nelly and now he's clinging onto her. How dare he hurt Nelly like this? Damn, I really want to give him a good beating"

"But how are you going to beat him if you can't even get near him?" Abigail asked.

"L..." Zack was at a loss for words. It was all because he wasn't strong enough, he couldn't even protect the people he cared about. Zack looked up. Through the clear glass, he could see Cornelia and Marcus waiting for the elevator

They stood far apart, both in silence

Soon, the elevator doors opened. Cornelia went in first, followed by Marcus. As the elevator door closed, nothing could be seen anymore.

“Can we go now?” Zack asked impatiently.

Jayden gave way, “After you”

Cornelia and Marcus entered the elevator together. She was going to the first floor, Marcus too.

The elevator arrived quickly, and they stepped out one after the other.

Wherever Cornelia went, Marcus was always there, trailing behind in silence. After handling the paperwork, Cornelia entered the courtroom Marcus was there too, right beside her. Cornelia couldn't stand it anymore. She turned to him, ‘Marcus, what on earth are you up to?’

Marcus chuckled his voice low and charming. “Well, well, you finally decided to speak to me”

Cornelia scoffed, turned away from him. Whatever he was up to, let him be

She ignored him, but his deep voice came through again, I've been keeping tabs on Granny Rebecca's case. Today's verdict day. Thought I'd drop by”

So, it was all about Granny Rebecca No matter what, Marcus was indeed good to Granny Rebecca. To get her treatment, he didn't hesitate to spend a fortune on experts.

“Thank you” Cornelia expressed her gratitude.

Marcus leaned back in his chair, “No need to thank me. If it wasn't for me, Granny Rebecca might not have...”

Cornelia cut him off, “It's the murderer who's guilty, not you. I don't blame you, and you don't need to blame yourself”

Suddenly, Marcus grabbed Cornelia's hand, holding it tightly.

Cornelia was startled, tried to pull her hand away, but it was no use, "Marcus, let go of me!"

But Marcus wouldn't let go, "Cornelia, this is the last time, the very last time..."

"What last time? Let go of me first!"

But Marcus only tightened his grip.

Cornelia's eyes reddened in anger, "Marcus, we're divorced. I'm not your wife, you're not my husband, and we're no longer related. What exactly do you take me for?"

Marcus was afraid to see her cry, I'm sorry! I just. He just instinctively wanted to hold her hand, to be close to her. He couldn't control himself.

Suddenly, a loud voice came from the podium, "The trial is officially starting, silence in the court."

Cornelia stopped talking, letting Marcus hold her hand. He held on, all the way until the judge announced the murderer's life sentence

Cornelia wished the murderer would pay with his life, but she respected the verdict. She got up and was ready to leave when the murderer saw her. The once calm murderer suddenly became agitated, shouting at Cornelia and Marcus. "Marcus, don't be a fool, leave that woman as soon as possible. If you stay with her, she'll kill you."

Before the murderer could finish, he was taken away by the police.

Everyone in the room turned their eyes to Cornelia and Marcus.

Cornelia intended to leave, but whether it was due to haste or slippery shoes, she wobbled, almost falling. Marcus, quick as a cat, caught her in time, "Easy there."

Thanks!" Cornelia pulled her hand back, "I appreciate you being here for Granny Rebecca's affairs today. But I can handle things from now on, you don't need to worry about me anymore."*

Marcus watched her, took a while before speaking.

“Cornelia, this might be the last time I’m with you. From now on, you’re on your own.”

‘I’ve always been on my own, Cornelia took a step back, creating a gap between her and Marcus. Marcus, I’ve got something to spill.’

“Shool, I’m all ears. Marcus’ voice was still smooth and pleasant, but it didn’t have its usual deep and powerful tone

Cornelia noticed something odd about his breath, it seemed a bit ragged. But he looked okay, so she didn’t think much of it. “If you ever fall for some other woman in the future, make sure you give your current girlfriend a heads-up. That cold attitude of yours, it’s really gut-wrenching”

Marcus took a pause before he responded, “I’m sorry”

Cornelia didn’t expect an apology from him. His apology meant he knew he messed up, yet he still went ahead with it. This meant he no longer considered her feelings when making decisions

“I know sorry doesn’t cut it.” Marcus was cut off by a sudden coughing fit.

Cornelia instinctively wanted to help him, but she held herself back. ‘Need me to call a doc?’

Cornelia hoped Marcus would take care of himself, but then she reminded herself that they were no longer together it was someone else's job to worry about his health, she didn't have to butt in

Luckily, Marcus' coughing fit stopped just after a few coughs. "Let me walk you home, okay?"

"No need" Cornelia smiled and took out a fancy box from her bag "Here's your necklace back."

Marcus' gaze dropped to the box she was offering, but he didn't take it. The necklace is already yours."

"It was never mine to begin with, it was meant for your wife, and I'm no longer your wife. It's too much. I don't want it. I don't want to be reminded of my failed marriage every time I see it"

"A necklace is an accessory, it's not meant to be taken back once given. It's yours, you can do whatever you want with it.

"Well then, I'll just get rid of it." Cornelia lifted her hand and threw the box on the ground, then she laughed. "Are you okay with the way I handled it?"

The box broke apart, the necklace inside snapped, the gems and embellishments scattered, beyond repair. Cornelia looked at the mess and suddenly laughed out. "Marcus, you have no idea how hard I worked to keep a straight face talking to you. You also have no clue how much I wanted to rip your mask off. So, Marcus, let's not see each other again, okay?"

Marcus felt a sharp pain in his chest, almost coughed up blood, but he managed to control it.

Cornelia gave him a smile, then turned and walked away.

'Cornelia'

Marcus called out her name again. But this time, Cornelia didn't stop, neither did she turn around. She just walked away. Before long, she disappeared from his sight, as if she had completely vanished from his world.

Marcus suddenly lost his balance, but thankfully, Jayden appeared just in time to support him. "President Hartley-"

Marcus took a deep breath, stood up straight again, watching Cornelia's fading figure.

When Cornelia proposed the divorce, she was eerily calm, almost inhumanly so. She left the Hartley family, left him, all with a level head. When they met again, she was still composed, not a hint of emotional turmoil.

Marcus knew all too well, the more a person suppressed their emotions, the more likely they were to have an internal crisis. This was the only emotional outburst from Cornelia since she had brought up the divorce.

Marcus then asked, "Has Old Augustine arrived?"

"Yes, he has Jayden paused slightly before adding if Old Augustine learns of your divorce with Miss Cornelia, he'll definitely whisk her off to the Capital It'll then be a struggle just to catch a glimpse of Cornelia Why are you still arranging it this way?"

"Grandpa Augustine, he and i Comelia couldn't bring herse to mention the divorce, not wanting to worry him and quickly changed her words, "He did come with me He was just here I have to run off now Them's something I need

"What's the matter? Grandpa Augustine

Before Comelia could come up

'Marcus went too far! He had that grant nd Abigail approached Zack was fuming. Even upon seeing a stranger beside Comelia, he couldn't contain his anger, us from approaching you. He's divorced you and he's still clinging on, what the hell is he up to?"

"Nelly, did Marcus divorce you? Though old Grandpa Augustine had a sturdy intimidating bellowing voice was deafening Upset Grandpa Augustine could be mally

Cornelia didn't want Grandpa Augustine to make any rash decisions on her behalf. It was me who divorced him, not him divorcing me. There's a world of difference between the two"

Grandpa Augustine didn't believe Cornelia, and turned to look at Za "Tell me, what happened?"

With a powerful aura around him, Grandpa Augustine got Zack talking despite his reluctance He spilled the beans about the whole story After hearing everything. Old Augustine was furious, "Marcus had just assured me that he would treat you well, and he reneged so quickly What a bastard Cornelia thought Old Augustine was going to give Marcus a piece of his mind, but to her surprise, he changed his tone, "Nelly you did the right thing. A fickle man like him is not worth it. Come back to the Capital with me I'll introduce you to someone much better
