

Chapter 675 Alliances

On the stage.

Adelina seethed with anger, itching to have someone put this insolent young man in his place immediately. Yet, her fury had to wait. The wedding ceremony wasn't over.

As for Timothy, even though he appeared upset, there wasn't a lot of anger brewing inside him.

He had almost feigned his anger earlier. He had foreseen Liam causing a scene, yet still extended an invitation to the Dark Night Organization.

Because he never cared if Liam disrupted his wedding from the very beginning!

So, upon seeing the coffin crib, Timothy was amused and swelled with pride.

Even if Liam had sent that coffin crib, he remained blissfully ignorant that soon he'd be nurturing Timothy's own child!

This episode of tension quickly dissipated, and Liam remained silent. The wedding resumed its smooth, orderly progress.

Then the moment arrived for the couple's vows.

The priest began to recite the marriage script. "Miss Sandoval, would you like to..."

His words were abruptly cut off by an unexpected shout from the crowd.

"Hold on!"

Liam suddenly lifted his hand, grinning malevolently.

The atmosphere instantaneously grew thick with tension.

All eyes turned to Liam, speculating on his next move.

Liam grinned and said, "Miss Sandoval, take your time with those vows. I've been enduring this long enough.

Allow me to offer some advice. The Sandoval family, being one of the four major families in the capital, should think twice before welcoming someone like this into your home. Wouldn't that tarnish the family name? After all, there are plenty of better choices than Timothy among the friends gathered here. Miss Sandoval, consider your words carefully, to avoid any potential future regrets."

With those words, a ripple of laughter spread through the audience.

First the coffin crib, and now this speech.

By this point, even the most naive guests recognized that the envoy from the Dark Night Organization was there expressly to provoke a commotion!

On this occasion, the Dark Night Organization's representative's sheer audacity suggested an outright clash with the Sandoval family.

This led various unaligned smaller factions to ponder their choices.

Before Adelina had a chance to speak, another voice chimed in from the audience, "Even if the four major families of the capital don't hold sway in the delta region, they don't deserve such disrespect from Dark Night Organization! I suggest you stay out of the Sandoval family's business!"

Emerging from the crowd was the speaker, readily identified by all. It was Carville Padilla, from one of the four major families.

He was overseeing his family's quest for the rare-earth mine this time.

Among the four major families, the Padilla family allied with the Sandoval family, so Carville naturally took a stand for them.

Given that alliances existed, the Hoffman family had an ally of their own, of course.

Emerging from the crowd was another man, Javier Ramirez, also from one of the four major families. He glanced at Carville, wearing a subtle smile, and remarked, "The Dark Night Organization merely offered her some guidance. You're making it sound more grave than it is. Moreover, Miss Sandoval hasn't voiced her opinion yet. Why the rush to speak on her behalf, Carville?"
