

Chapter 807 The Distress Call

After visiting her father's grave, Julie asked Liam, "What have you been doing for the past five years? Why does Bernie fear you?"

Upon hearing this, Liam chose to remain silent.

He deemed it inappropriate to mention the Salvation Society as it could lead to unnecessary trouble.

"I was disabled at that time. Fortunately, my men risked their lives to rescue me, enabling me to flee from the Hoffman family and live at sea. But then, I encountered pirates. Luckily, Fiona saved me, and I survived. However, our boat sank, and I drifted to a small island. With the aid of the islanders, I gradually recuperated and eventually returned to Invone."

Liam elaborated, spinning a story that was partly true and partly fabricated to mask the truth temporarily.

Julie furrowed her brow and asked, "And what about Bernie?"

Liam replied slowly, "He owes me a debt from our time in Salem. He wishes to repay it now."

A hint of suspicion crossed Julie's eyes. Bernie's attitude suggested a deeper motive beyond mere repayment.

Speculating that Bernie might owe a significant debt to the Hoffman family in the past, Julie didn't dwell on it and nodded in understanding.

She empathized with Liam's ordeal, having undergone a similar experience herself. She could comprehend what had happened to Liam.

Simultaneously, she sighed. "He was indebted to you when you were part of the Hoffman family's heirs. Helping you now means he'll owe you nothing in the future."

Julie appeared somewhat melancholic.

She was well aware that with Liam's reappearance, their family would be thrust into the spotlight, likely leading to a multitude of troubles in the days ahead.

Liam managed to resolve the situation today because he had previously assisted Bernie. If there ever came a time when there was no one owing Liam any favor, he might find it challenging to receive help from others.

Observing Julie's anxious state, Liam was about to offer some words of comfort when suddenly, the phone tucked in Julie's pocket rang abruptly.

As she picked up the phone, Yesenia's voice sounded anxious and fearful. "Julie, please return quickly!

Casper is threatening to evict me from the Cortez family!"

Yesenia's loud voice on the phone was clearly audible to Liam, who was standing beside Julie. He asked doubtfully, "The place you currently reside in is owned by the entire Cortez family, not just Casper. How could he possibly force you out?"

Julie clarified, "Initially, it was my uncle who provided us shelter, and we returned to Salem together. However, now that my uncle is absent, Casper is gradually asserting control over the Cortez family. Given his numerous past defeats, he's likely seeking revenge."

Upon hearing Julie's explanation, Liam's expression darkened slightly. Without further words, they hurried home.

Night had fallen by the time they arrived at the Cortez family's residence.

At that moment, inside the villa, Casper was in a frenzy, smashing everything alongside several men.

The villa was in shambles, with furniture fragments strewn about, creating a scene reminiscent of a battlefield.

Casper, glaring at Yesenia, threatened aggressively, "Widow, this is your last chance. You need to move

Chapter 807 The Distress Ca  +120 Points at most out right now!"

Terrified, Yesenia trembled but remained silent, unwilling to leave.

Enraged, Casper ordered his men, "Throw her out onto the street."

Despite her fear, Yesenia held onto a pillar, engaging in a tense standoff with the men.

Casper sneered, "You're a stubborn widow. Julie's marriage into the Haynes family could benefit the Cortez family, but now that it's messed up, you're of no use. Don't try to stay here."

At that moment, Julie arrived and intervened, yelling, "Stop!" Naturalise malik.