

Chapter 815 A Dissolute Teacher

Liam seethed with anger at the unreasonable behavior of the female teacher. Were it not for his years of restraint on Genesis Island, he might have resorted to more drastic measures.

Despite calming down, Liam couldn't help but sneer. "When children were quarreling, instead of meditating, you joined in and discriminated against a student's parent. You're not fit to be a teacher."

The teacher brushed off Liam's accusation. "I simply spoke the truth. What's wrong with that?"

"You know very well how unacceptable your behavior is," Liam retorted, his anger palpable.

The teacher scoffed, "Do you even know who Cyrus' father is? He's the head of all the major stores in Salem! Compared to him, you're nothing."

She continued, "Moreover, none of the parents here are as worthless as you. Children should learn about class differences."

Liam, hearing this, felt a surge of rage. While he understood societal divisions, exposing children to such notions was unacceptable.

As a teacher, spreading such divisive ideas among kindergarten children was unforgivable.

In a fit of anger, Liam sharply retorted, "Fine, since you're so focused on backgrounds, bring Mr. Ortiz here. Let's see if he supports your skewed education approach."

Unfazed, the teacher responded, "Sure, you'll regret this soon."

She adeptly dialed Shane Ortiz's number, and a flirtatious voice greeted her from the other end, "Hannah, are you calling to invite me? Since my wife isn't around today, I'll be waiting for you at Room 808, Ocean Hotel."

Hannah's face flushed suddenly, yet she swiftly regained composure, coughed lightly, and replied, "What are you saying? Your son was involved in a scuffle, and the other parent is present. He not only refuses to apologize but also seems quite forceful. He's requesting your presence here."

Upon hearing this, Shane erupted in anger, exclaiming, "What? Really? I'll be there immediately. Who dared to bully my son?"

Hannah urged, "Hurry up and come here."

After that, she ended the call complacently and then sneered at Liam. "I've summoned Cyrus' father. Don't even think about backing out now."

Even though Hannah hadn't put her phone on speaker, Liam's heightened physical abilities allowed him to hear the conversation distinctly.

At that moment, Liam couldn't help but feel an intensified sense of disgust toward Hannah.

Not only did Hannah twist the truth, but she also seemed to be having an affair with Cyrus' father. Such actions made her unworthy of being a teacher, let alone a respectable person.

It turned out Asher had been raised in this environment, being taught by such a teacher and enduring mental and physical bullying from children his age. Liam felt deeply sorry for his son when he thought about it.

At that point, Liam decided firmly that once he handled the immediate issues, he would expose the whole scandal.
