Swoosh...

With a slight turn, he seemingly evaded Andrius' spear by accident, but it was actually a masterful dodge. He allowed the spear to pass beneath his armpit.

The Insect Ruler evaded while questioning with a cold scoff, "Andrius Moonshade! What are you doing?" Andrius was not interested in discussing this further. He swiftly retracted the long spear and executed his second strike.

The sound of the spear cutting through the air was chilling. It was a move from the Burden of Nine Skies. The Insect Ruler saw his formidable momentum and did not dare to underestimate him. He immediately used his own technique to block the attack.

After blocking Andrius' second spear, the Insect Ruler said in irritation, "Why are you attacking me? Are you crazy?" Andrius did not speak and attacked for the third time. The speed and strength of this one were an entire level above the previous one.

The Insect Ruler was caught off guard by Andrius and had no choice but to use his technique again to stop the spear. He blocked the attack through a series of defenses.

"Andrius Moonshade, that's enough!" The Insect Ruler was furious. "Do you really think I won't get angry?" In the face of the infuriated Insect Ruler, Andrius casually retracted his spear and said, "Why are you angry, Insect Ruler? Since you want to cooperate, isn't it reasonable for me to test your strength?"

The Insect Ruler laughed insincerely at those words. "It's said that the power of the Burden of Nine Skies is extraordinary when it reaches the pinnacle of its form. In fact, I've always wanted to try it out myself."

Wade and Kate had spoken ill of Old Hagstorm before.

However, Andrius had unwavering trust and believed that Old Hagstorm would never harm him, let alone be some great devil. During the Second War God and the fake emperor's numerous conspiracies and schemes, he had endured and showed immense tolerance, concealing his deep-seated grievances.

"I understand, Master." Andrius nodded, his mind filled with various thoughts.

Old Hagstorm continued, "The Insect Ruler wants you to intercept and eliminate various formidable opponents while they're traveling. Just agree to it. Don't feel burdened by it."

Andrius asked in confusion, "Master, even if it's part of the plan, we don't need to slaughter all the contestants who come to participate in the assembly, do we? If we do that, how different are we from the Insect Ruler? Isn't that assisting tyranny?"

Andrius was not thinking about his reputation as the Wolf King. He simply felt that this was morally wrong. "I've already considered that." Old Hagstorm smiled meaningfully and beckoned toward Andrius.

Andrius paused for a moment before leaning closer.

Old Hagstorm whispered a few words, and Andrius instantly understood.

"In that case..." Andrius' concerns were dispelled, and he answered, "I know what to do now, Master." "Go" Old Hagstorm nodded at him.

Andrius held the Argentum Qilin Spear and went out.

In the courtyard, the Insect Ruler was sitting by a stone table with his back to Andrius.

There was a pot of hot tea emitting steam on the table, indicating that it was freshly brewed.

Across him was an empty seat, clearly prepared for Andrius "Andrius Moonshade, the Wolf King, have you considered our cooperation?"

The Insect Ruler looked relaxed and calm as he sipped his tea slowly, appearing at ease. Swoosh!

Andrius responded with a thrust of his spear, like a dragon emerging from the abyss or a tiger pouncing down a mountain.

A fierce wind stirred up, sending the birds

outside flying. 23

Andrius instantly snorted and did not respond to his words.

The dispute seemed to be resolved in this seemingly harmonious setting

However, whether it was truly resolved or just temporarily subdued, paving the way for a larger conflict, remained uncertain.

Insect Ruler said with a vague smile, "So, Andrius, are you satisfied with the results?

What do you think about the cooperation?"

Andrius looked at the Insect Ruler and said faintly, "I will cooperate with you on one condition." Books Chapters Are Daily Updated Join & Stay Updated For All Books Updates...

After the test, Andrius realized that the Insect Ruler's strength was not inferior to his own. If they were to fight seriously, he might not be able to win. Furthermore, Old Hagstorm had a plan with the Insect Ruler so he had to thread the established path..

Of course, that did not mean he would completely submit to the Insect Ruler. He wanted what was due!

"What condition?"

“This condition should be quite simple for you.” Andrius stared at the Insect Ruler and did not shift his gaze away.

“When I came up the mountain, I had a guide from Bardan and several dozen Bardan soldiers accompanied me, but we encountered a wolf pack on the way. All the soldiers died in battle, and the captain was taken away by the white wolf king.

“I want you to personally intervene and kill the white wolf king, and help me retrieve the leader's body!” After delivering those words expressionlessly, Andrius added, “Insect Ruler, you've been operating in Mount Valdez for many years. Don't tell me that you don't know about the white wolf king.”

That was Andrius's plan!

He had seen the white wolf king's formidable strength. It would require a significant amount of time and effort for him to handle alone.

Thus, it was a wise choice to leave the matter to the Insect Ruler instead. “The white wolf king...”

The Insect Ruler laughed and was just about to speak.

However, one of his subordinates beside him said with an angry and resentful look,
