

Chapter 864 The Contradiction Was Clarified

The following day at the Williams family.

The Williams family quickly held an urgent meeting.

Derek was brimming with excitement. He got straight to the point, announcing to the Williams family members, "Big news, the elusive five-star general is throwing a birthday party tonight at Dragon Manor!"

His announcement set off a wave of excitement in the room. This five-star general was shrouded in mystery, and locating him had always been a challenge. Now, with him stepping into the spotlight, their task was simplified.

Besides, since it was a birthday celebration, it was the perfect chance for the Williams family to get friendly with the five-star general.

Derek then cleared his throat and said, "I've spent a lot on a gift. And I've called you all here to discuss who is best suited to present this gift."

This sparked a debate among everyone, each eager to grab this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

Amidst the argument, Niko yelled, "Enough! We can't just randomly choose someone for such an important event. I propose Derek decides himself."

His statement quickly calmed the noisy crowd.

Derek cleared his throat again and turned towards Niko's family, saying slowly, "I think Niko and his family should represent our Williams family."

At this point, it was clear to any observant person that Derek had planned to choose Niko's family all along. Although the meeting seemed fair, it was merely for appearances.

Meanwhile, Yesenia was restless and frustrated. She sharply pinched Newell, expressing her disappointment at his lack of influence.

At the same time, she felt a little regretful.

Only after joining the Williams family did she realize that despite being the eldest son, Newell held no real power. He merely carried the Williams family's name, a figure of authority only to those outside the family.

Regretting now was pointless for Yesenia. She had already married Newell a few days ago, and there was no turning back.

Yesenia's only hope now rested on Baxter, Newell's son.

Despite his flaws, especially when compared to Doyle, Yesenia still saw Baxter as far superior to Liam.

At this moment, with Derek announcing the final

Lori, feeling victorious, couldn't resist taunting Julie. With a sneer, she said, "Look at that, the five-star general has reserved the entire Dragon Manor for his birthday. It's a hundred times more lavish than Rosa's event. Where's your good-for-nothing husband? Let's see if he can book a place like that!"

Julie was at a loss for words, trapped in an uncomfortable situation. Lori, pleased with herself, left with a sense of triumph.

Shortly afterward, they all left the conference room. Niko and his wife made a point to approach Yesenia and said earnestly to Newell, "Newell, perhaps you should skip the group meetings from now on. Your focus seems to lie elsewhere. The Williams family was going to be handed over to Doyle. With him in charge, Baxter will be in safe hands. Don't let yourself be misled by those outside our circle!"

Newell heard this without showing any anger. He kept his usual calm and acted naive, saying, "I'm just here for the fun since everyone has gathered. Besides, I'd rather not get involved in the children's business."

Despite saying this, he secretly wished for Baxter to rise to power. But in such a scenario, he had to keep these thoughts hidden.

However, Doyle was proud and arrogant at the moment.

He boldly said to Newell's family, "Uncle Newell, please don't hold this against me. I'm off to Dragon Manor to personally deliver a gift. If the general favors me, I won't hesitate to be tough on certain outsiders as the future leader of the Williams family."

He didn't spell out the details, but his intentions were clear to anyone.

By 'outsider', he clearly meant Julie's family. In essence, Doyle was already signaling a brewing conflict. If he gained control, Julie's family would undoubtedly face his harsh treatment.
