Liam quickly regained his composure.

He muttered to himself, "It appears that the special power of light element is more crucial in Shadow Valley than I initially thought. Otherwise, why would the Prescott family's team be the only team venturing here?"

Realizing the significance of the special power of light element here, Liam felt a surge of optimism. He understood that he could use this to counter the numerous primogem beasts in Shadow Valley, which increased his confidence about his current undertaking.

Idris simply directed the team to continue advancing.

Liam decided to hide his full potential, maintaining his power at the level of a fifth-tier peak.

This was a strategic decision. He was aware that the average strength level of the Prescott family's team was also at the fifth-tier peak. This level of strength wouldn't turn heads or slow down the Prescott family's team in any way.

The group marched on, making their way directly towards the heart of Shadow Valley. Along the way, they used Cyan Light Lamp to eliminate several shadow beasts.

Liam secretly observed the Cyan Light Lamp.

He discovered that this seemingly ordinary Cyan Light Lamp had a suppressive effect on the shadow beasts.

The more potent the light special power, the more effective it was against these creatures!

Possessing the special power of light element made Liam feel quite at ease in Shadow Valley.

This ignited a deep interest in Liam for the legendary Shadow Palace, as he was more determined than anyone to quickly augment his abilities.

Along the journey, they faced a handful of shadow beasts, but these creatures barely slowed them down. During the process, Liam had stepped up several times, swiftly dealing with each threat to keep the team safe.

Susannah observed Liam's skillful handling of the shadow beasts, her eyes shining with admiration.

Indeed, it was rare for someone of Liam's age to achieve such a high level of fifth-tier strength.

Susannah, herself only a fourth-tier Primogem Warrior, felt a touch of sadness as she thought about her own unique yet cursed physical condition.

She regarded her unusual condition more as a burden than a gift.

If she couldn't find what she needed in the maritime secret realm, she feared she wouldn't live past twenty.

Susannah's constitution was an exceedingly rare light type.

Once Susannah hit the sixth tier, she would unlock the special power of light element. She could become really powerful.

However, destiny had other ideas.

While others might be oblivious, Susannah was aware of the implications of these sores: they signaled a looming risk of physical breakdown.

Susannah's only hope for recovery was to find a dark artifact known as the Shadow Flower in Shadow Valley.

Consuming the Shadow Flower, which held dark energy capable of counterbalancing the excessive light energy within her, offered a chance for healing.

Additionally, mastering the light source inside her would significantly boost her power.
