

Chapter 1964 Tyler's Child

"Don't worry about that, Hannah," Janet reassured her. "Just focus on staying healthy. That's the most important thing to me."

"Alright, alright," Hannah conceded. "But at least give me your address. I want to send you some local treats."

Janet chuckled. "Don't go to any trouble. I'll come visit after the baby's born."

"Okay, okay," Hannah agreed readily.

Just as Janet was about to end the call, a commotion erupted on the other end. Hannah started to say goodbye, but the phone was snatched from her.

A woman's voice with a thick accent boomed through the receiver. "Are you the girl Hannah raised?"

Startled, Janet replied, "Yes, that's me. Who's this?"

The voice instantly softened with confirmation. "This is Norma Ruiz, Tyler's ex-girlfriend. I found out I was pregnant after he went to prison. Now I'm alone with the baby. Through some digging, I learned his mother was still alive. Hoping the child could know its grandparents, I brought it to Hannah."

A wave of shock washed over Janet. She'd thought Tyler's imprisonment meant no further trouble, but Brandon delved into Norma's background, confirming she had a past relationship with Tyler.

However, Norma's reputation painted her as lazy and greedy. After she ran low on funds, she'd asked around about Tyler's family, leading her to Hannah.

Fearing Norma might harass Hannah, Janet suggested bringing her to their house temporarily.

Brandon proposed a paternity test for the baby, just in case Norma was lying.